By Robert C. Allright.

A half-century of unprecedented technological and scientific advancement was predicted yesterday by Charles F. Kettering, General Motors engineering wizard, who told the President's monopoly committee he was "ashamed" of the progress to date.

Kettering, inventor of the self-starting motor and developer of ethyl gas and the modern Diesel engine, said he would like "to invent a way to get new industries started." He said a wealth of men, materials and untapped opportunities await industrial projects to put them to work.

"We are way behind technologically," he told the committee. "I am ashamed of our kind. We haven't done a very good job."

Knudsen Is Witness

Invention's "Boss Ket" said there were "perfectly enormous" developments ahead in unexplored fields of organic chemistry and medical science and that research divisions of large institutions were bending every effort to overcome the technological lag and "get new industries started."

Led by President William S. Knudsen and Kettering, a procession of General Motors Corporation officials closed the automobile phase of the monopoly committee's patent investigation with testimony that production, not patent control, was the industry's aim. Automobile patent practices in general were commended in a statement by Chairman O'Mahoney.

But "Boss Ket," as he is known to the men who have worked with him in originating new industries and improving existing ones, stole the monopoly committee's show.

$4,000,000 Brain

The mechanical genius, who was first to bring the electric light to the farmer, who contributed importantly to the baby industries of air-conditioning and mechanical refrigeration, who just completed ten years' perfection of the Diesel engine, and whose brain is reputedly insured by General Motors for $4,000,000, said he and all other inventors are "amateurs."

"We are all amateurs," he said. "The research worker is always working on a problem he doesn't understand, but is trying to solve."

Committeemen, seeking patent law incentives to invention unrestricted by monopoly control, were informed by Kettering that the inventor would continue to invent whether or not there were any patent laws "because he has to do it."

Peculiar Psychology

"The psychology of the inventor is a peculiar thing, and not understood," he said. "An inventor is someone who wants to invent something and doesn't know why he wants to do it, just as a musician wants to play a musical instrument and an artist wants to paint a picture. They don't know why."

Kettering said he thought the "patent machine is good basically,"

Windsor Reported After London Home

London, Wednesday, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Today's Daily Mail said friends of the Duke of Windsor have revealed he is negotiating for lease or purchase of a town house in Cadogan Square, a few minutes by automobile from Buckingham and Kensington Palaces.

Buckingham Palace officials would neither affirm nor deny the statement of the Duke of Kent in Copenhagen yesterday that the Duke of Windsor would return to England.

2 Families Need $225 To Get on Their Feet

Father of 8 Children Must Have Operation to Be Able to Work Again; Mother of 3 Wants Part-Time Job

The Washington Post Christmas Fund this year will once again be devoted to the District's neediest families selected from the "unemployed employables"—decent families, deserving, honest, willing to work—but desperately in need of a helping hand. Each day, between now and Christmas, stories of these families—selected with the cooperation of member agencies of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies—will be printed. Read these stories. And then decide if you can help. Any amount, however small, is more than welcome.

MR. AND MRS. P have eight children, four boys and four girls. Their ages are 15, 11, 9, 7, 5, 4, 2 and 1.

Mrs. P is under the care of a doctor.

The oldest boy attends Health School and three of the younger children are under clinical supervision.

Neediest Families No. 10 and No. 11.
Family P	$150
Family Q	75
Total	$225

Mr. P has had no regular work since May. A physical examination has disclosed he is suffering from the poisoning effects of adenoids and tonsils that should be removed. But Mr. P refuses to submit to an operation—which would make it impossible for him to continue, for a time, to pick up odd jobs here and there—unless he is assured his family will receive, through his hospitalization and convalescence, at least the care that he now is giving it.

With a family of this size, the majority of its members in poor physical condition, there is a great need of ordinary food, special food and clothing until Mr. P can once again, as he has before, support it. The agency which has investigated and is in charge of the case believes it can secure a full-time job for this father of eight as soon as his malady has been cured. The amount needed in the meantime is $150.

FAMILY Q is the story of a mother and three sons, attempting to get along in the world after being deserted by husband and father when hard times made the going difficult.

Mrs. Q's three boys are 18, 14 and 6 years of age.

The burden of the family's support now rests entirely on the shoulders of the eldest boy but his part-time jobs are not sufficient in number to meet the requirements of all four.

Mrs. Q. is not eligible for assistance through the usual channels because she is "employable." She

Ford Suggests Tax Cuts to Aid Business

Opposes Exemptions For Special Purposes And Incentive Levies

By the Associated Press.

Business, as represented by Edsel Ford and other employers, told a Senate committee yesterday that lower taxes would go a long way toward promoting industrial recovery.

Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co. and son of Henry Ford, its founder, said he believed a reduction of taxes would be "as good an incentive to business as any."

Testifying before the Senate Profit-Sharing Committee, he expressed opposition, however, to granting special tax credits for plant expansion, purchase of equipment and regularization of employment, asserting they "might lead to consequences difficult to handle."

(The committee is studying the question of allowing such credits in the hope of encouraging production and the sharing of industrial profits with employes.)

Big Spending Attacked

Walter Schwartz, Philadelphia textile machinery manufacturer, expressing views similar to Ford's, suggested that taxes be lowered immediately to a rate which would balance Government revenue and expenses if national income were $80,000,000,000 or $90,000,000,000 a year.

(Officials have estimated national income will be $65,000,000,000 this year.)

"Let the budget get out of balance," Schwartz said. "If you lower taxes materially now, business will increase so that the national income will soon reach $80,000,000,000 or $90,000,000,000 and revenue will balance outgo. Then we can turn to the serious business of balancing the budget."

Inquiry Sought On Vast PWA Power Deal

Bridges Assails Plan To Spend $90,000,000 For Nebraska Properties

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, said yesterday he would ask Congress to investigate the Public Works Administration's approval of the proposed purchase of private electrical properties by "the broken-down PWA-financed water power districts of Nebraska."

He characterized the plan as "a deal which PWA has just engineered with certain Wall Street bankers and a White House favorite 'financial wizard' to pull some of PWA's power chestnuts out of the fire."

Congress should inquire, he said, whether the districts, if they could not acquire $90,000,000 worth of "profitable private utilities" would not soon be known as the "outstanding folly of the New Deal."

Millions for Myers

He said Guy C. Myers, financial agent for the power districts, would get a 2½ per cent fee of approximately $2,225,000 on the $90,000,000 in bonds the districts propose to issue to finance the purchase.

"The New Dealers have been shouting about alleged 'water' in private utility stocks," he said. "Certainly they have been following in the footsteps of Samuel Insull in this case."

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, veteran advocate of public power ownership, and the late Arthur Mullen, Omaha attorney and Democratic National committeeman, were active in the organization and promotion of the districts.

Bridges' statement followed Secretary Ickes' recent announcement that he had approved a change in indenture governing the $18,561,000 in bonds which the Government holds on the two districts involved in the deal. The PWA had also

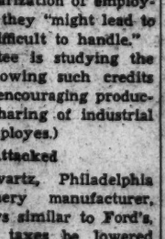
Anna Hahn, Poison Slayer, Must Die in Ohio Chair Tonight

By the United Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 6.—Anna Marie Hahn, blonde poison murderess accused of the "mass killings" of four elderly acquaintances, collapsed in her death row cell tonight when her attorneys informed her that Gov. Martin L. Davey had ruled she must die in the electric chair tomorrow.



MRS. HAHN

The 32-year-old German woman sank sobbing into a chair as her attorney, Joseph Hoodin, entered the cell and told her:

"I have bad news for you."

She nearly fell from the chair, and Hoodin and a prison attendant caught her. The doomed woman, who will be the first of her sex to die in an electric chair in Ohio, sobbed:

"Oh, my God! I didn't think he would do that!"

Gov. Davey said he had decided there was no ground for intervening, and that Mrs. Hahn must die as scheduled at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Father James Sullivan, prison chaplain, and Warden James C. Woodard, who accompanied Hoodin to the woman's cell, told her "everything possible" had been done.

"This is not the end," Hoodin suddenly interposed, but he refused to amplify his remarks or explain what further effort could be made to save Mrs. Hahn's life. Appeals to the State Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of the United States have been rejected.

A few minutes later Woodard emerged from the cell and said that after the first shock of learning she must die, Mrs. Hahn "seemed calm." Her 12-year-old son, Oscar, was led into the cell and he fell weeping into his mother's arms.

Bill Reported In Making to Scrap FCC

3-Man Board Believed Aim; Roosevelt Aid Uncertain; McNinch Man Denies Move

By James D. Secrest.

Legislation designed to abolish the Federal Communications Commission and to substitute a more centralized administration is being drafted by Thomas G. Corcoran, co-author of several New Deal acts, it was reported yesterday from an authoritative source.

While there has been no indication as yet that President Roosevelt intends to sponsor the bill, it is believed to have the approval of Chairman Frank McNinch, who has been closely associated with Corcoran since his recent "purge" of the FCC.

The proposed administration, it is understood, would be vested in a three-man agency with a larger board above it in a quasi-judicial capacity. Originally, Corcoran is said to have favored a one-man administrator, but he rejected the idea.

The present commission, as set up by Congress, is a bi-partisan body of seven men.

Corcoran Denies Report

M. L. Ramsay, special assistant to McNinch, denied that such legislation is being drafted or has been considered. He made the denial, he said, after conferring with Chairman McNinch and Corcoran.

Corcoran declined to be quoted directly but said he was not drafting the legislation.

Meanwhile, another of Corcoran's proteges was added to the FCC legal staff. He is William C. Koplovitz, formerly of St. Louis, who at the time of his transfer yesterday, was acting general counsel of the Federal Power Commission.

Koplovitz will be one of three assistant general counsel under William J. Dempsey, chief of the legal staff, who was elevated to his position early this fall at the beginning of the McNinch "purge." Dempsey, whose appointment was reported to have been directed by Corcoran, was associated with Koplovitz on the Power Commission when McNinch was chairman.

The FCC also appointed S. King Funkhouser, of Roanoke, Va., temporary special counsel to assist Dempsey in the investigation of networks and alleged radio monopolies.

Shake-up Predicted

Presaging a shake-up in the FCC legal division, a formal statement by the commission said:

"His (Koplovitz's) appointment represents a step in the plans for reorganization of the legal staff."

A change in the setup of the Federal Communications Commission was proposed almost two years ago in the Brownlow report, which formed the basis of the Government reorganization bill. The Brownlow committee recommended that the FCC, as well as other independent commissions, be merged with an executive department, in this case the Commerce Department.

The commission would have been preserved, however, as a quasi-judicial agency, while the adminis-

Nazi Plane Sinks At Manila After Hop From Tokyo

Manila, Dec. 6 (AP).—Six men aboard Germany's big Condor goodwill plane escaped unharmed when it sank in Manila Bay today, after flying 1,863 miles from Tokyo.

Three of the plane's four motors failed after the craft was over the bay, and it was brought down within 200 feet of shore near the village of Rosario, 20 miles from Manila. Filipinos in rowboats rescued the five crewmen and the one passenger.

The plane was believed undamaged and was expected to be on dry land at low tide. The plane, then known as the "Brandenburg," made a round-trip flight from Berlin to New York last August.

U. S. Workers Get Full Holidays On Dec. 24 and 31

Government employes yesterday were promised full holidays on Christmas and New Year Eves.

President Roosevelt issued an executive order excusing Federal employes from duty and closing all Government offices on Saturday, December 24, and December 31.

In an earlier order the President announced Government employes would be paid a day earlier than usual, on December 30, so that checks could be cashed in time for the three-day New Year's holiday.

Presidential Boom Starts For Garner

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Tex., Dec. 6.—Texans opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt, boosted Vice President John Garner for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1940 today and heard him boomed as "a liberal Democrat practicing liberalism many years before some of the most vocal present-day sponsors of liberalism were born."

Old cronies who knew Garner when he played shortstop on the Coons Soup Hollow Baseball Team joined Democrats from all parts of Texas to organize the first official "Garner for President in 1940" club.

Hundreds of the faithful—from the youngsters who aspire to his career of high public service to the oldsters who remember the earnest young lawyer as the best shortstop Red River County ever produced—had been called to Detroit, only a few miles from where Garner was born in a mud-chinked log cabin.

Many Carry Placards

There were few youngsters among the 400 who parked cars in a cotton patch at a log cabin, five miles off a main road in the back country, where Garner's mother was born.

A sagging porch served as a speakers' rostrum while from a crumbling brick chimney hung a portrait of the Vice President.

Many of those present carried crudely-lettered placards boosting the Garner candidacy.

The crowd cheered as speakers praised Garner's mental and physical vigor and spoke of his belief in the old-fashioned principles of democracy.

Roy Miller, of Corpus Christi, for many years a close friend of the Vice President, and a State Democratic leader, lauded Garner for his belief in a "pay-as-you-go system" and called him a liberal "without tinge or taint of radicalism."

Mentioning Roosevelt only once, and then saying Garner was the best qualified American to succeed him, Miller urged a "traditional" view of third-term possibilities.

He Has No Comment

"We utter no criticism or disparagement of any other man," he asserted in offering Garner's name for consideration. "We offer no complaint concerning the public acts or official records of anyone. We do, however, plant our feet firmly upon democratic and American tradition in respect to terms of service. We believe devoutly that the future safety of the republic depends upon our adherence to the old landmarks in precept as well as tradition."

Miller said Garner's age was a point in his favor.

"He possesses all of the mental and physical vigor of men 20 years his junior . . . the only thing that is old about John Garner is some of his political philosophy," Miller said.

Garner recently celebrated his seventieth birthday.

McAdoo, Ill With Indigestion, Ordered to Bed

By the Associated Press.

Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, announced last night that William Gibbs McAdoo, war-time Secretary of the Treasury, had suffered an attack of indigestion and was confined to his hotel apartment.

The physician added that the 75-year-old McAdoo, who resigned recently as Senator from California to become head of a steamship company, was "resting easily."

He said he had ordered him to remain in bed for at least 24 hours and predicted that if he did so he would "snap out of" the illness, which was described as "slight."

Because of McAdoo's advanced age, associates expressed some concern over his condition.

Chamberlin, Flier, Loses $245 in Car To Thieves Here

The automobile of Clarence Chamberlin, transatlantic flier, was broken into near Union Station early yesterday and $245 worth of jewelry and clothing stolen.

Chamberlin, here on business, parked his machine on First street northeast. The thieves pried open a window, he said.

In the loot were four watches, clothing, some flat silverware and a package of airplane blueprints. He said the blueprints were of little value.

France and Germany Sign 'No War' Pact to End 11-Century Feud

Nazis Launch New 'Purge;' Army, Civic And Party Leaders Seized, London Hears

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Dec. 7.—The Daily Express political writer said today that information reached informed quarters last night from Germany suggesting that a fairly extensive political purge was under way there, involving high army officers, civic leaders and civil servants.

The article said economic conditions in Germany were becoming increasingly difficult, leading to political tension involving stability of the Nazi regime.

The writer said that as a consequence the popularity of many German leaders was diminishing but that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's personal popularity was as strong as ever.

Officials Arrested

The Daily Express information added that the Gestapo (Nazi secret police) had arrested high civic officials in Liepzig, Dusseldorf and Vienna and had arrested 40 high army officers, including several generals.

The paper also said several important officials of the German foreign office had been arrested.

The Express said moderate Nazi opinion was "out of favor" at present with Hitler, who is relying heavily on advisers from the more extreme wing of the Nazi movement.

The newspaper said that all world capitals are closely watching developments in Germany.

Refuge in U. S. Asked

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 6.—An appeal to President Roosevelt to help hard-pressed German Jews by offering 100,000 of them temporary refuge in the United States was published today by the Juedisches Nachrichtenblatt, only remaining Jewish organ.

Simultaneously several German newspapers assured their readers that an anti-Jewish campaign in Rumania had only just started, that the anti-Semitic Iron Guard organization there was stronger than ever and that Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, Iron Guard leader who was shot dead by Rumanian guards November 30, would be avenged.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, published the caption, "Ugly Jews," with a picture of Magda Lupescu, close friend of King Carol of Rumania, and her father. Only 13 days ago Carol was the honored guest of Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

New Restrictions

United States consular officials said they hoped to obtain a clarification by tomorrow of the effect a new anti-Jewish restriction would have on American Jews holding property in Germany. The decree of the economics ministry forbade Jews to sell or pawn valuables without a government permit.

The newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung estimated at $3,080,000,000 the total of Jewish wealth which "must be moved" under an order authorizing Nazi officials to liquidate Jews' property. The American Chamber of Commerce expressed belief few Americans could be involved because American Jews have been leaving Germany as rapidly as possible. United States consular officials sought an

Arms Without Tax Rise Goal Of Roosevelt

Hopes Budget Revision Will Prevent Boost in Levies in Coming Year

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt believes the vast current national defense program should be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis, but that does not mean necessarily an increase in taxation in the coming year, he said yesterday.

Budgetary adjustments, with cuts in relief and other funds, may make it possible to avoid boosting taxes to care for the defense expenditures, it is felt at the White House.

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt made plain at his press conference, re-employment, pump-priming and industrial recovery are not involved in the defense program.

National defense is national defense and nothing else, he said emphatically.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that the taxation question, in relation to defense needs, is still in the study stage and no decisions have been reached. Incidentally, he told reporters they would have no news on his budget message until Congress meets on January 3.

The President was asked whether he had determined what percentage of the cost of the increased defense

Mt. Rainier Physician Jailed By Nazis as Money Smuggler

Dr. Oscar Lavine, 32, of Mount Rainier, Md., and Dr. Michael George Albert, of New York City, have been convicted in Vienna of violation of Germany's currency laws, dispatches revealed here yesterday.

DR. LAVINE

Lavine was given six months' imprisonment and fined 60,000 marks ($24,000) or alternatively given two months' extra imprisonment, the Associated Press reported.

Albert, also 32, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment at hard labor plus a $24,000 fine or alternatively two months' extra imprisonment in lieu of the fine.

Isadore Lavine, brother of Dr. Lavine and a local attorney, declined to comment on the case until he had received official notification from the State Department with which he had been in contact since arrest of the pair August 9.

The State Department said last night that the Consul General at Vienna had sent two members of his staff to the trial as observers, but no official word had yet been received in Washington.

Time already spent in prison was ordered deducted from both sentences. Albert has been imprisoned nearly four months. Lavine obtained release shortly after his arrest on $10,000 bail. There was no indication from Vienna whether the sentences would be appealed.

The exact nature of charges against the pair was never officially revealed, although the United Press reported they were convicted on currency smuggling charges.

They were said to have been arrested in a cafe near the Vienna branch of the American Medical Association. Albert was accused of

Colony Issue Shelved And Consultation Promised in Treaty Signed at Paris

By John Elliott

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Dec. 6.—An eleven-century quarrel between France and Germany apparently was liquidated when Georges Bonnet and Joachim von Ribbentrop, foreign ministers of the two countries, signed their "no war" pact this afternoon.

By this document the German government solemnly recognizes the frontiers now drawn between the two countries as "definitive," renouncing all claims to Alsace and Lorraine which have been a bone of contention between Teuton and Gaul ever since Charlemagne's empire was divided among his heirs by the treaty of Verdun in 843.

It is true that an acknowledgment that these borderline provinces were French was made by Gustav Stresemann, of Germany, in the Treaty of Locarno, but whereas the Locarno pact never was accepted by an important part of the German people, the new document carries the blessing of Reichsfuehrer Hitler and the nationalist element in the Reich.

Colony Demands Shelved

[In conversations following the ceremony, the Associated Press said, Ribbentrop also gave Bonnet assurances Germany would not immediately press claims for return of colonies lost to France under mandates after the World War.

[He was said to have maintained Germany's "theoretical claims," but to have pointed out that the Reich had made no formal demands and did not intend to do so for the time being.

[A similar attitude was understood to have been taken toward Italian clamor for French Tunisia and Corsica. It was said no definite decisions were reached in a review of the Spanish situation.—Editor's note.]

"Good Neighbor" Pledge

The peace declaration signed today consists of three articles.

The first states that the two governments "share fully the conviction that the peaceable and good neighborly relations between France and Germany constitute one of the essential elements of the consolidation of the situation in Europe and of the maintenance of Europe's peace. The two governments will consequently employ all their forces to assure the development of the relations between their countries in this sense."

The second article declares the "two governments note that between their countries no question of a territorial order remains in suspense and they solemnly recognize as definitive the frontier between their countries as it is placed at present."

Article three states that "the two governments are resolved under reserve of their particular relations with third powers to remain in contact on all questions interesting their two countries and to consult jointly in cases where later evolutions of these questions are likely to lead to international difficulties."

Both Retain Alliances

This leaves France free to maintain her alliances with England and Soviet Russia, and Germany at liberty to preserve her accords with Italy and Japan.

The Franco-German declaration has two texts—French and German. They were signed by Bonnet and Ribbentrop in the presence of Premier Daladier, M. Coulondre, French ambassador in Berlin, and Count Johannes von Welczeck, German Ambassador in Paris.

The ceremony was held in the famous Clock Hall of the French foreign ministry, where the Kellogg Pact was signed ten years ago. But

Cleric Assails Roosevelt Son At Dies Inquiry

Dr. Anderson, Local Preacher, Elicits A Prompt Response

By Sidney Olson.

A tall young Washington minister who denounced James Roosevelt, son of the President, for allegedly meager contributions to church and charity, told the Dies committee on un-American activities yesterday that the Nation's "barnyard morals" contribute largely to the breakdown of Americanism.

Sitting ramrod-straight in the witness chair, 33-year-old Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, of the First Congregational Church, hit bluntly at many social habits of the Nation, and pointed his remarks directly on one occasion to assert:

"A young man of great political prominence (James Roosevelt), with exceedingly large income, recently caused his income tax reports for several years to be printed. Since they were printed at his request, I suppose there is no objection to a comment on them. One thing interested me as a minister. In not a single year had he contributed to a church. And in only one year did his gifts, out of income running high into five figures, exceed $28 per annum.

James Disputes Statement

"Actions like his are responsible for the loss in support for benevolent organizations."

In Hollister, Calif., according to the Associated Press, Roosevelt, who last week assumed a vice presidency in a moving picture company, said he "most certainly did contribute to the support of churches." He added: "I did not make a practice of claiming deductions for such contributions in my income-tax returns.

"If the Washington minister who criticized me would be interested I would be glad to tell him of my contributions." He said he did not care to air his contributions publicly, but that if Dr. Anderson wanted them he would be welcome to all such information.

Anderson, stressing that he presented only a "clergyman's eye view" of the situation, told the committee that "any departure from the historic principles of the Founding Fathers in these four areas—education, family life, democracy and moral ideals—constitutes un-Americanism."

Of education he said it is now "a form without substance."

Charging that schools and colleges through emphasizing the monetary value of an education, "have seriously demaged the spiritual ideals of our people," he then said of home life:

"They (our homes) are turning to Saturday night jamborees and Sunday afternoon cocktail parties, which is about as far from the early American tradition as hell is from heaven.

"Morals of Barnyard"

"Children are sent (if they come at all) to church and not brought. Morals are of the barnyard variety. Divorces claim one out of every six marriages."

He said that since 1932 the acceleration of un-Americanism had seen a 30 per cent decrease in contributions to religious organizations, a 20 per cent decrease to general benevolences, a 24 per cent decrease in support of community chests and an 18 per cent decrease in support of colleges, while expenditures for luxury or dispensable items such as cosmetics, alcohol, tobacco, etc. had increased from 25 to 317 per cent.

He added caustically:

"I have a collection of excellent autographs, neatly placed at the bottom of respectful letters written to me from most of the 20 members of my denomination who hold seats in the Congress of the United States. They say they are interested in a church of their persuasion in Washington: they promise attendance at its services of worship.

"But in practice they are as bad as the heathen who believe only in geographical or local gods, for apparently the God they worship exists only back home where they are elected.

"The church treasurer tells me that not in many years, nearly ten, has there come to our support a recognizable contribution from a member of Congress."

The committee had further difficulties with Mrs. Ellen Woodward, WPA director of Federal theater and writers projects, yesterday, as she counter-questioned the members on several occasions when they were attacking plays produced on the projects. Representative Harold Mosier (Democrat), of Ohio, asked that she be disqualified as a witness, but Chairman Dies, of Texas, and other members shouted him down.

The day's last witness was Henry G. Alsberg, Writers Project director, who told the committee how he had striven to drive out communism in the projects and how thoroughly all books and publications of the projects were examined before they were printed. At the close of his lengthy testimony Chairman Dies, expressing the committee's sentiments, thanked the witness profusely.

"You are one of the frankest witnesses to come before us," he said. "Your attitude should be commended most highly. You have given us the benefit of your views without prejudice and without attacking the committee. I want to thank you."

Hull Given Big Vote of Confidence On Eve of Conference at Lima

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Dec. 6.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who heads the American delegation to the Lima Conference opening Friday, receives an overwhelming vote of confidence from the American public in a survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP.

More than 8 out of every 10 voters who have formed an opinion about his work as Secretary of State say they think he has done a good job. Even a majority of Republican voters join with Democrats in lauding the record and accomplishments of the veteran Southern statesman.

To test the public's attitude toward the Secretary, the Institute asked a cross-section of voters in all parties: "Do you think Cordell Hull has done a good job or a poor job as Secretary of State?"

Approximately two-fifths of the voters, chiefly in the lower income groups, replied that they had formed no definite opinion or did not feel qualified to answer. Among the remaining majority, sentiment divided as follows:

Good Job	85%
Poor Job	15

Especially interesting is the vote by parties. The rank and file of Republicans, whose party has generally opposed a low tariff policy, strongly indorse the man who believes in mutual tariff cuts among nations.

Of all Republicans with opinions on Hull, 75 per cent said he was doing a good job. Among Democrats the vote of approval was 91 per cent.

It is evident from the comments of voters in the survey that Secretary Hull is popular for three chief reasons. One is his reciprocal trade treaty program. A second is the feeling on the part of voters are "soundly moderate," or, as one voter put it, "he's neither a radical nor a conservative, but a good middle-of-the-roader." Third, a large number of persons echo the view of one voter that "he has done a good, efficient job with less fuss and ballyhoo than any other New Dealer."

Those voters who do not favor the Secretary either had objections to some part of his trade treaty program or felt that his foreign policies were "too weak."

Public confidence in Secretatry Hull has been expressed in many ways in previous Institute studies of opinion. These have shown that the Secretary is the best known and most liked member of the Roosevelt Cabinet; that he is second only to Vice President Garner as a popular choice among Democrats for 1940, and that his program of reciprocal trade agreements with other countries is approved by a majority of voters in both major parties.

The latest treaty was that signed with England last month. When hearings on this pact opened last spring the Institute asked voters whether they approved of Hull's policy in seeking such a trade agreement with England. The vote was more than 7 to 3 in the affirmative. Even Republicans approved the policy by a 6 to 4 majority.

Prentiss, Bank Examiner in Shake-up, Quits

Tells Delano He Wants To Resume Private Practice of Law

William Prentiss, jr., chief national bank examiner at San Francisco, who recently was ordered transferred to Minneapolis, yesterday submitted his resignation to Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency.

Prentiss was involved in a shake-up among chief national bank examiners which followed institution by the Securities and Exchange Commission of a stock delisting proceeding against Transamerica Corporation, Pacific Coast bank holding company controlled by the Giannini interests.

Irwin D. Wright, chief examiner for the Tenth Federal Reserve District, with headquarters at Kansas City, was ordered to San Francisco, headquarters of the Twelfth District, to replace Prentiss. W. H. Baldridge, chief examiner for the Ninth District at Minneapolis, was ordered to Kansas City.

Instead of taking the Minneapolis assignment, Prentiss, a close friend of former Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor, informed Delano that he desired to return to private law practice.

Prentiss was made first deputy comptroller after O'Connor came to Washington in 1933 as comptroller. A native of Illinois, he practiced law in Los Angeles for some years.

Last January he resigned as first deputy to take the position of chief examiner at San Francisco. O'Connor resigned two months later to run for Governor of California and was defeated in the Democratic primaries.

Some weeks ago Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau forced the resignation of Marshall R. Diggs, who was first deputy, and, in the absence of a comptroller, acting comptroller at the time, and G. J. Oppegard, second deputy comptroller. Both are close friends of O'Connor. They were given temporary positions on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation legal staff.

Resignation of Prentiss removes from the Comptroller's Office the last of O'Connor's assistants.

The Treasury, it has been revealed, is co-operating with the SEC in the action to delist stock of Transamerica from stock exchanges, based on the charge that the registration statement covering the company's stock contains "false and misleading statements."

Kennedy Calls 21-Nation Parley On Wheat Crisis

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—United States Ambassador Kennedy, as chairman of the 21-nation wheat advisory committee, today called a meeting January 10 in London "to consider the present world wheat crisis."

The committee's London offices said the meeting was called on the request of the United States, British, French and Australian governments.

TVA Waterway Plan Called Aid to South

Alldredge Testifies Program Would Benefit Industries

By the Associated Press.

A TVA official predicted yesterday that development of the Tennessee River as an artery of commerce would stimulate greatly the industrial expansion of the South.

J. H. Alldredge, director of the authority's commerce department, told the Congressional committee investigating TVA that a major portion of the agency's work was directed toward this end.

Experiments already are being conducted, he said, to determine the quality and quantity of existing resources and the development of new uses. These studies, he added, included experiments with waste products, proper conservation and increasing of forests, and utilization of agricultural products for industrial purposes.

"If we didn't unlock the door to economical distribution of these products through development of an adequate navigation channel our efforts would be largely wasted," he asserted.

The witness clashed repeatedly with Representative Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey, over the value of the navigation phase of the TVA development. The Congressman plied him with questions concerning traffic possibilities on the river, once the proposed 648-mile long, 9-foot channel is completed.

"There won't be traffic until we get terminals and a clear channel," Alldredge insisted.

Wolverton contended that truck competition due to improved highways had reduced both river and railroad traffic in the United States in recent years.

Alldredge expressed belief if the two could be co-ordinated, river traffic would increase sufficiently to justify the expenditure for improvement of the channel.

Nash-Kelvinator Sit-Down Ended

Detroit, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—A sit-down strike of 980 employes at the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation plant ended tonight when company officials agreed to open negotiations over the lay-off of a shop steward.

Workers on the night shift went to their jobs as usual. Day employes will report on schedule tomorrow morning.

New York Republicans in Congress Favor Wadsworth Over Martin for Minority Leader

Dunkirk, N. Y., Dec. 6 (AP).—By a majority of at least one, the 20-member New York Republican delegation in the next House of Representatives favors Representative Wadsworth, of Geneseo, for minority leader, Representative Reed said today.

WADSWORTH

Reed, who is polling the delegation, said ten replies favored Wadsworth for the post vacated by Representative Snell, of Potsdam, N. Y.; four were for Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, and five have not replied.

Hence, if all five of the remaining members should oppose Wadsworth, he still would be ahead by one vote in his home State.

Memphis, Dec. 6 (AP).—Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, said today he would seek the discharge of John L. Humbard, of Gatlinburg, Federal Bureau of Roads employe in charge of highway construction in east Tennessee, with a salary of $4,800.

"I obtained his appointment a good many years ago," declared McKellar, "but I think it would be a good thing now if he left the bureau."

The Senator said Humbard, a former contractor, supported Senator Berry in the August primary. McKellar backed Tom Stewart, successful candidate.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (AP).—Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, conferred with hotelmen here today on plans to bring the Democratic national convention to Philadelphia in 1940.

"If we get busy right away we can put this thing over," he said. "I believe in taking time by the forelock. That's what I did yesterday."

The Senator referred to a statement he issued urging President Roosevelt to run for a third term.

Philadelphia put up $250,000 for the 1936 Democratic national convention.

[President Roosevelt yesterday laughed off a reporter's question whether he would accede to Guffey's "demand" that he run again.—Editor's note.]

Secretary Ickes told reporters yesterday that if he makes the race for Mayor of Chicago he would "run, not walk."

Leaving the White House, the Interior Secretary and Public Works administrator said he "had the President busy" on routine affairs, but that they did not mention the Chicago mayoralty situation.

600 Picket Hearst Papers in Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—Pickets supporting a Chicago Newspaper Guild strike against the Evening American and the morning Herald and Examiner continued their march in front of the building housing the two Hearst papers today despite snow flurries.

The guild claimed 800 employes had joined in the walkout.

Merrill C Meigs, publisher of the American, said members of American Federation of Labor unions were filling "all jobs in all departments." Both sides contended contracts had been violated.

16 Die, 31 Hurt As Mine Cars Plunge Mile

Some Decapitated Trying To Jump as Train Runs Wild Down Shaft

By The Canadian Press.

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Dec. 6.—A string of 26 cars carrying 250 miners to work in a coal mine here ran wild down a mile and a quarter grade today when the haulage cable snapped, and 16 of the men were killed. The train crashed into the shaft wall at an estimated speed of a mile a minute.

Thirty-one of the miners were in a hospital tonight with critical injuries and more than a score of others had minor hurts.

The accident occurred in the Princess Colliery of the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. at Sydney Mines. When the train of cars broke loose from the cable and began to slip down the 10 per cent grade of the almost 2-mile-long shaft some aboard leaped to safety. Others who leaped later were hurt or killed.

The shaft is only 11 feet in diameter, and many who jumped from the plunging cars hit the walls and were thrown back under the wheels of the train.

Some Decapitated

Others were decapitated by the low, jagged roof of the shaft.

There were many still in the cars when the train piled into a heap against the wall in its final crash. Rescue workers had difficulty extricating bodies from the wreckage.

One veteran who survived the final crash, 60-year-old Billy McKeighan, said he wanted to jump with the others, but found he could not move.

"I thought I'd die on the way down. It was awful. I didn't think I'd live through that ride. We were going terribly fast and I wanted to jump but I knew I wouldn't have much of a chance if I did so I hung on.

"Some of the men who jumped first must have been all right. But the ones that jumped after that were just thrown against the walls and back under the cars.

"After that it was just too bad. I don't know what the others that were with me did. Men were jumping all around me.

"I remember the awful crash, but that's all."

He was thrown clear of the crash and found unconscious by rescuers.

Rescuer George Dwyer said bodies "were strung out the whole mile and a quarter down.' He said "three or four" were still in the wreckage when he reached it.

Priests Among First Down

Priests and ministers went down with the first rescuers. At the top of the shaft a large group of relatives and friends gathered quickly. Hardly a word was spoken. Whenever a group of rescuers came to the surface there followed tense moments during identification of dead and wounded.

Then another period of taut, silent waiting.

WPA Uncovers Evidence of Earlier Civilization

An ancient pottery vessel, almost intact despite centuries in the soil, is extracted carefully from the subsoil of Abbott Farm, near Trenton, N. J. WPA workers on the archeological project have unearthed much evidence of an early Indian civilization

2,500 on WPA Dig to Find Where the Indians Came From

Archeologists Direct the Hunt in 22 States for Origins of Aborigines; Cost Is Placed at $3,000,000

"We will dig and dig, search and search, discover and discover."

That seems to be a new motto of the Works Progress Administration on the strength of its revelation yesterday that it is spending more than $3,000,000 on some 50 major archeological projects throughout the country.

One of the things WPA wants to find out is, "Who are the American Indians and where did they come from?" So 2,500 men, from pincenezed scholars to illiterate laborers, are working daily on projects in 22 States, excavating relics of aboriginal culture.

Universities, museums and scientific bodies are co-operating in the program, furnishing the brain while WPA furnishes the brawn. According to Dr. Vincenzo Petrullo, who is directly in charge of the work, the cause of archeological research has received a tremendous stimulus from WPA and results today are a quarter century in advance of what they would have been had this type of aid not been available.

Ninety-seven per cent of the Federal funds spent on the excavations during the last year has gone for labor, average cost per man per year being $621. More than 90 per cent of those employed have been taken from local relief rolls.

Plans are under way for a co-ordinated series of excavations under WPA auspices, with many independent searchers pooling their knowledge and theories. They are expected to shed more light than we have had heretofore on the question of where the Indians came from.

One of the most notable WPA archeological projects is the Ocmulgee National Monument, near Macon, Ga., site of many large earth mounds. These have yielded a treasury in artifacts of past civilizations.

The WPA is building a $150,000 museum to house the implements and other materials which the excavations have surrendered.

Other projects have been or are being developed in New Jersey, Minnesota, Alabama, California and other States.

Work Resumed As Fisher Body Union Ends Strike

Flint, Mich., Dec. 6 (AP).—Production was resumed today at General Motors' Fisher Body Co. plant No. 1, which had been shut down last Friday by a strike involving a wage dispute.

Directly or indirectly, more than 25,000 workers were affected by the strike.

All except the Pontiac Motor Co. workers were expected back on the job today. It was estimated it would require about 15 hours of production here to put Pontiac back in operation.

Numbers Suspect Held to Grand Jury

Arrested in the 1400 block of O street northwest yesterday, Harry E. Rockelli, 42, 1400 block Columbia road northwest, was held to the grand jury on a charge of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

Vice squad detectives said they found a small quantity of alleged numbers slips in his possession. Marked money also was recovered, they said.

Rockelli was arraigned before United Sates Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. A colored man arrested at the same time was released.

Prayers Win Reprieve for Dog Skippy

Skippy, 2-year-old dog, was granted a reprieve from death and a new trial yesterday in answer to the prayers of his three child owners.

The dog, a mixture of Airedale and German shepherd, was sentenced to death by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran two weeks ago, when the court ruled he was vicious. Yesterday the case was ordered reopened on the basis of reports from veterinarians that the dog did not appear harmful.

Skippy is owned by the children of Ewart R. Rice, 3977 First street southwest. Monday night, when they were told of the new trial, Vincent (10), Lucian(12) and Violet (14) said they took turns lighting a candle in the front window of their home for their pet's return. Judge Curran ordered the dog's death after witnesses testified they either had been bitten by the dog or he had leaped upon them.

Officials Seek Marijuana Without Kick

22 Narcotic Authorities Hear How Traffic in Drug Is Discouraged

Federal, State and local experts joined in an effort yesterday to develop by scientific experiment an Indian hemp plant without the narcotic properties of marijuana.

Marijuana cannot be exterminated entirely, Commissioner of Narcotics Harry J. Anslinger pointed out after a meeting yesterday of 22 narcotic authorities, because fiber from the plant has commercial uses for which about 500 tons a year are used.

Dr. Herbert J. Wollner, consulting chemist of the Treasury Department, was appointed co-ordinator of the scientific work carried on by Federal agencies and by private research and educational agencies.

The first problem, Anslinger pointed out, is to determine the active constituents of the narcotic obtained from the hemp plant, and the second is to develop a plant which will fill industrial requirements without producing the narcotic.

In the last year narcotics officials have destroyed 16,000 acres of the plant growing wild in Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota. This would have produced 26,000 tons of plants and an undetermined amount of the drug.

Bull Rampages Across New York

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—A yearling bull on a rampage turned midtown New York into an impromptu bull ring today.

Charting a zigzag course through traffic, the fugitive from a barbecue snorted and pranced from Twenty-fourth street and Madison avenue to the outskirts of Times Square.

The bull was captured by Patrolman George Brennan, who pursued him on the runningboard of a car, leaped on his neck and wrestled him to the pavement.

Centralization Will Go On, Jackson Says

Necessary and Right, He Argues, Though Not Administration Policy

The trend toward centralization of power in the Federal Government will continue "no matter what promises are made by seekers after power," Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson last night told the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers.

Addressing a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, Jackson denied that assumption of powers once regarded as belonging to the States had been a deliberate policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

"The charge that this Administration has designed an invasion of 'States' rights' is as false as it is frequent," he declared. "The true cause of the shifting power has been not design but necessity.

"Let Us Face Facts"

"Both the necessity and the tendency will continue, and no matter what promises are made by seekers after power, these underlying economic trends will make promises yield to conditions. Let us face the facts."

"While States, too, and cities, have extended their activities," Jackson said, "the most striking increase is that of Federal effort. I want to point out to you the cause and necessity for most, if not all, of the increase of Federal activity."

He recalled that, as the depression of the early 1930s deepened, real estate taxes on which municipalities had to depend to meet relief as well as general expenditures failed.

It became necessary, he declared, for the Federal Government to come to the rescue of local governments, since "a State's rights' doctrine, a policy of aloofness from the struggle of local governments, meant letting them sink into financial bankruptcy and social disintegration."

He said a policy had been followed of trying "to preserve the benefits of local initiative and local administration, while not allowing problems to go unsolved because of the inadequacy of local revenues."

"Red Light" System Urged

Since Federal policies "enter more closely into the lives of people," he said, "it follows that points of contact and causes of irritation and misunderstanding between Federal and local governments will be more numerous."

This places upon attorneys and other officials of Federal and local governments, he declared, the responsibility of co-operating to the fullest extent "to make democracy work."

Revival of the "red light" district in cities throughout the country was advocated in the morning session of the institute by Wesley R. Tinker, jr., assistant city solicitor of Wheeling, W. Va.

"I believe authorities will never be able to stamp out this vice," he said. "The health of the community would be greatly benefited by segregation in red light districts."

George VI to Hold 2 Courts in March

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Lord Chamberlain announced tonight King George and Queen Elizabeth would hold two courts in March, 1939, because in May, the month in which the first courts of the season usually are held, they will be visiting the United States and Canada.

It was understood United States Ambassador Kennedy would follow the precedent he set this year by restricting American presentations at court to wives and daughters of United States Government officials and of prominent Americans resident in London.

Mary Washington College Gets WPA Grant of $15,035

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—The Works Progress Administration announced today a grant of $15,035 to Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, toward construction of $35,126 home management building and improvements to the grounds.

An $11,450 grant to Norfolk County to be supplemented by $3,214 appropriated by the board of supervisors of the county was also announced by the WPA for the installation of a sewer system in the Crestwold residential section near Portsmouth.

Assailing Quick Marriages, Alexandria Orders New Forms

City Reluctant to Become a Gretna Green As Maryland 48-Hour Law Threatens To Shift Business to Virginia Tomorrow

With a don't-come-near-me warning resounding down her glamorous streets—but 1,000 new license blanks tucked away in the clerk's office at the courthouse—the ancient Virginia City of Alexandria yesterday "steeled" herself to succeed Elkton, Md., as the hurry-up marriage capital of the East.

Today's the last day romance can blossom in a rush at Elkton—where couples tomorrow will be compelled to wait 48 hours between the license and the ring.

Alexandria, whether she wishes it or not, is in a natural position to "take over." In Virginia the wedding can follow the license immediately. And Alexandria is easily accessible.

Requests for "more information" have poured into the city from several States and—since the publicity attendant upon the closing of the Elkton mart—the marriages there have increased around 10 per cent.

In preparation for what may happen, the city ordered 1,000 license blanks—which was four times as many as usual, Dr. W. A. Plecker, director of the Bureau of Vital Statistics in Richmond, declared as he frowned and expressed the fear Alexandria might attempt to make a business out of the situation.

"I hate to see this thing," Dr. Plecker declared, expressing the opinion that Virginia should have a law similar to the new one in Maryland "to stop this disgrace."

Alexandria ministers have declared they will do all they can to keep from participating in a rush-marriage business. Elliott Hoffman, clerk of the court, declared last night that he is "on the record against making a rushing business out of marriage." Office hours will be strictly observed and nobody can get a license after 4 p. m. nor on Saturday afternoon, he said.

Nevertheless, it takes Clerk Hoffman only a few minutes to issue a marriage license and it takes a nearby justice of the peace less than a minute to perform the ceremony. If both parties are 21 and there is no liquor on the breath, there's little that can be done to delay a ceremony.

Nearby Arlington has a justice of the peace named Bryan Gordon, who is declared able to say a wedding ceremony in 35 seconds—but Arlington is not expecting to become a flourishing "Gretna Green."

"If the taxi drivers figure in the rushing up business, as they did in Elkton," an Arlington County resident said last night, "it is but natural that they would take District couples and others coming from the District to Alexandria—because the fare is more. Also, luckily for us, Alexandria is a little better known."

Meanwhile, the historic town yesterday failed to live up to the expectation of the prophets who have assigned the Maryland marriage license business to the city, by not having a single marriage license to its credit. One couple applied, but they were so near the closing time that they failed to be listed while the blanks were available, so the books were closed for the day.

Chinese Beat Off Enemy Landing Near French Area

Hongkong, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Central News Agency reported tonight Chinese machine-gunners had turned back an attempted Japanese landing at Pakhoi, western Kwangtung province.

The Chinese opened fire from hidden emplacements as the Japanese approached in small boats from two warships. Many were killed, it was said, and the survivors were forced to return to the warships.

Pakhoi is less than 70 miles east of the extreme northeastern tip of French Indo-China.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported that Chinese militarists had refused to permit more than 200 foreigners, including 34 Americans, to leave Kuling, a mountain resort which had been their refuge since last June.

The United States gunboat Monocacy was standing by at the Yangtze river port of Kiukiang, near Kuling, ready to take Americans aboard.

Manufacturers Break Convention Attendance Record

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Executives representing America's 50,000 biggest industrial corporations gathered today for the largest attendance recorded for an annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers—"The Congress of American Industry."

Ford Suggests Tax Cuts to Aid Business

Profit

tacked Government spending and, responding to a question from Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, agreed that the incentive he preferred would be to "have Government mind its own business"

Ford said his motor company believed in the principle of sharing profits directly through high wages. Largely as a result of that policy, he said, there has been no "serious" labor trouble in the Ford plants.

"We try to be more than fair to our employes," he added. "We try to pay them just as high wages as we can and produce at as low cost as possible, thus creating volume production."

Cites Minimum Wage

In carrying out this policy, Ford said, the company established a minimum wage of $5 a day in 1914, raised it to $6 in 1920 and has maintained it there except for a drop in the depression to $4 a day.

Since 1920, Ford said, his company has paid employes $27,800,000 in interest and special returns on money they have invested in a special company fund.

Herbert D. Brown, Glendora, N. Y., efficiency expert, suggested that employers be allowed to deposit with the Federal Treasury funds to be held in reserve to bolster pay rolls in depressions.

Profit-Sharing Favored

Miles E. Robertson, general manager of Oneida, Limited, of Oneida, N. Y., outlined employe benefit plans by which he said employes had received 41 per cent of the company's earnings in the last ten years.

Lloyd Riford, vice president of the Beacon Milling Co., Cayuga, N. Y., said he opposed incentive taxation, but favored the principle of profit-sharing.

Diedrich Gristede, New York chain grocer, told of a wage bonus plan which he said had eliminated waste and had improved profits.

Bill to Abolish FCC Is Drafted By Corcoran

trative functions would have been assigned to another bureau.

Congress turned the proposal down flatly so far as the FCC was concerned, and the Administration measure that finally evolved stipulated that the commission should be left intact.

Since McNinch took office with instructions from President Roosevelt to "clean house," the diminutive chairman has tried, with some success, to bring about a centralization of control within the commission.

His first act was to abolish the three divisions which formerly handled radio, telegraph, and telephone matters separately, subject to final commission approval. Later, with the support of a majority of the commission, he abolished the examining division and thus centralized control of radio cases directly under the commission and the general counsel.

Because two, and sometimes three, of the commissioners have balked at some of his measures, McNinch has revealed a growing irritation with the seven-man commission setup.

Like Air Authority

At a recent press conference he stated he believed that a three-man agency might function more efficiently than the present body and said that he stood ready to discuss the matter with the President. He has not been invited to a White House conference since then, however.

The Corcoran plan, while not completed in detail, is understood to follow in general the setup of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

There the Civil Aeronautics Authority functions in a quasi-judicial capacity, while the administration is left to one man.

The whole question of control of the communications industry is expected to be investigated by the next Congress along with the record of the present commission. Senator White (Republican), of Maine, will be one of the first to propose a broad inquiry, and others are due to follow.

9 Indicted in Plot To Send Planes to Spain Via Mexico

By the Associated Press.

Brownsville, Tex., Dec. 6.—The Federal Government today indicted Gen. Roberto Fierro, former head of the Mexican army air corps, six other Mexicans, two Americans and a Mexican aviation company for conspiring to violate the neutrality act of 1935.

The indictment named as coconspirators but did not indict Felix Gordon Ordaz, Spanish Ambassador to Mexico, and Jose Melendreras-Sierra, military attache to the Spanish embassy.

The bill charged 19 airplanes were transported from the United States to Mexico for transshipment to loyalist Spain.

The indictment specifically charged these men: Gen. Fierro, Col. Rafael Monroe, Gen. Alfredo Lazama Alvarez and Col. Gustavo Leon, of the Mexican army; Fritz Bieler, of California; Cloyd P. Clevenger, New York aviator; Sixto Del Rio, Carlos Paini, and Jose Aspe Suinaga, listed as manager of the Cia. de Transportes Aereos Pacifico.

18 Are Indicted For Counterfeiting

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Eighteen men were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of making and passing at least $500,000 in counterfeit bills and coins.

The indictment said the defendants operated throughout New York State, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Canada.

James J. Maloney, supervising agent of the Secret Service unit in New York, named "Blackie" Joe Laudanno, who he said had been arrested on three earlier occasions of counterfeiting charges and once on a robbery charge, as the ring-leader of the combine.

"SHOP EARLY FOR CHRISTMAS"
Is Something More Than A Slogan

It is a wise and timely suggestion for more reasons than one. First: you have a larger variety and more desirable merchandise from which to make your selections. Second: stores are less crowded . . . you receive greater attention. To this should be added . . .

WHEN YOU SHOP BETWEEN 9:30 AND 3:30 YOU AVOID THE RUSH PERIODS ON STREET CARS AND BUSES

Greatly increased bus and car service is provided for the holiday season . . . but even with additional facilities, we cannot prevent crowding during rush periods. Hence the smart shopper rides between the going and coming of thousands of office workers.

Thorpe Accuses U. S. of Designs On Medicine

Drug Manufacturers Told to Weigh Claims For 'Socialization'

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, yesterday warned the country's drug manufacturers that the Federal Government has designs on the private practice of medicine and dentistry and advised them to weigh carefully all claims for "socialized medicine."

He spoke at the mid-year meeting of the American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, which is being held at the Washington Hotel.

Professional men "live in a fool's paradise if they think politics will stop with taking over trade and industry," he said. "It will extend to the professions."

Washington already has State medicine, he said, apparently referring to Group Health Association, which serves Federal employes on a prepayment basis.

Called Scandal in Germany

"As usual, the argument is that it is in effect in some foreign country," Thorpe continued.

He offered figures to show that sickness insurance in Germany has created an economic scandal, shortened life expectancy, increased infant mortality and increased the number of sick days per year per capita from 5½ to 28.

At the morning scientific session, association members heard reports on progress in pharmaceutical research. One outstanding is the development of nicotinic acid as a specific in the treatment of pellagra.

Recognized Recently

C. R. Addinall, of Merck & Co., pointed out that, although nicotine acid was first prepared in 1873, its therapeutic value has been recognized only recently. It is estimated that in this country alone 400,000 persons are afflicted with pellagra, a disease due to vitamin deficiency in the diet.

Charles Wesley Dunn, general counsel for the association, spoke at an executive meeting last night on regulations proposed by the Department of Agriculture by authorization of the new food and drugs act, which will go into general effect on June 25, 1939.

The Secretary of Agriculture possesses wide powers under the new law and the A. P. M. A. reportedly is seeking to effect compromises on some of the regulations he has proposed.

Mission to Lepers To Hear Dr. Stixrud

Dr. Thomas T. Stixrud, superintendent of the leper colony at Luebo, Belgian Congo, will speak at the meeting of the Washington Auxiliary of the American Mission to Lepers on Friday. Also on the program, to begin at 10:30 a. m., are Mrs. Emory Ross, wife of the general secretary of the mission, and the Rev. W. G. Borchers, of Sao Paulo, Brazil. The latter is the father of the Rev. Walter Borchers, assistant pastor of the First Congregational Church.

A native of Norway, Dr. Stixrud received his medical training in this country, becoming a medical missionary in 1914.

Nazis Swarm Into Lima to Block Hull

Buttonhole Delegations, Say Democracy Doesn't Suit Latin America

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 6.—Private conferences in which German representatives showed an unofficial but active hand strengthened the belief today that the United States will have a battle to win its "Americas for the Americans" objectives in the eighth Pan-American conference opening here Friday.

Representatives of Germany's propaganda ministry were arriving on nearly every plane and ship. They circulated among groups of delegates, handshaking and saying a few words in favor of totalitarianism as against democracy wherever opportunity offered.

Call for "Strong Men"

They argued that Latin-American countries needed a stronger system of government than democracy to control or prevent frequent political uprisings and that a strong man with a strong hand was the only solution.

Those well informed were of the opinion that Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay probably would oppose any plan which could be interpreted as "turning our backs on Europe." Bolivia's attitude, too, appeared to be doubtful.

A more favorable stand toward the United States was expected from Brazil, Cuba, Colombia, Chile, Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru, Mexico, Panama, Costa Rica, Honduras, Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti and Santo Domingo.

Arriving today, Foreign Minister Cantilo of Argentina reiterated opposition to a formal defensive alliance for the hemisphere.

Cantilo also said Argentina was averse to creation of an international court of inter-American justice or an American league of nations.

U. S. Proposals Ready

Aboard the S. S. Santa Clara en route to Lima, Peru, Dec. 6 (AP).—Secretary Hull said tonight the United States delegation had perfected several concrete projects for presentation to the Pan-American Conference which opens Friday in Lima. He said he considered it impolitic to reveal their nature in advance of the conference.

The Secretary said the projects were included in the reports submitted to him this afternoon by the eight committees which he appointed ten days ago to study particular topics likely to appear on the agenda.

Hull said he expected to call upon the Peruvian foreign minister soon after his arrival at Lima tomorrow and also to arrange an appointment with President Benavides of Peru. After that he intended to pay his respects to other delegations, he said.

Hull put the finishing touches on his speech for the conference today. He probably will deliver it Saturday afternoon.

Alf M. Landon, one of the American delegation, appeared today with a white patch over his right eye, which had become slightly infected.

French Veterans Urge Spanish to Decree Yule Truce

Hendaye, France, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Five million French war veterans appealed tonight to the Spanish loyalists and insurgents to declare a one-week Christmas truce and halt aerial bombardments laying waste the Mediterranean coast.

The proposal of the National Confederation of French War Veterans coincided with loyalist appeals to the French and British governments for intervention in an effort to halt Gen. Franco's air raids. The Barcelona government said the raids are being staged by Italian and German aviators "operating independently of Franco's Junta."

Franco's "reprisal" raids today centered upon Barcelona, Valencia and nearby towns.

King Tells Ulster Of Trade Hopes

Belfast, Dec. 6 (AP).—King George sent a message to the new session of the Ulster Parliament today saying he hoped the new Anglo-American trade agreement would promote employment and help the northern Ireland linen industry.

Italy's Jewish Persecution Laid To Desire to Harass England

Mussolini Uses It as Means to Curry Favor With Arabs and Show Solidarity With Reich, British Lecturer Says

Persecution of Jews in Italy enables Mussolini to harass England, evince an attitude of solidarity with the Nazis and curry favor with the Arabs, Thomas B. Morgan, lecturer, author and foreign correspondent, declared yesterday in a talk to students of Trinity College.

MORGAN

Although persecution arouses no popular response from the Italian people, the policy is an effective one in Palestine, he said.

"German and Italian interference there," he declared, "is working toward disruption of the Jewish state."

Morgan pointed out that Mussolini had set himself up as a protector of Islam. Anything which embarrasses England in that part of the world, he said, is in line with Italian policy of breaking down British influence in the Mediterranean area.

Hitler's persecution of Jews, as well as his antagonism to the Catholic church, Morgan said, springs originally from his impassioned zeal to promote the Germanic idea to the exclusion of everything else.

This obsession, he declared, prompts the Feuhrer to treat German Jews as aliens. The international character of the Catholic church has drawn Nazi antagonism, he explained.

"The great advantage the dictatorships have over democracies lies in the fact that the dictators can change their minds any moment and by so doing change the collective mind of the nation of people they control," Morgan observed.

"It is this mobility of decision and action which so frequently gives the dictator the upper hand. Democracies have no offset for it. Yet they are in dire need of developing some means to match dictator mobility."

In an address at St. Mary's Seminary last night, Morgan declared the encyclicals of Pope Pius XI show a quality of statesmanship and a grasp of world problems seldom revealed in writings of their kind.

The rugged physique developed by the Pope in Alpine climbing, in which he set all-time records in his early years, has helped him during his spells of illness, Morgan said.

Morgan also delivered a talk at Georgetown Visitation Convent in the morning on "When In Rome."

Italians Shout 'Tunisia' Again; Official Lends Encouragement

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 6.—Fascists met French protests against their Tunisian claims today with noisy demonstrations. Blackshirts and university students marched through the streets of Rome, Genoa and Turin shouting "Tunisia and Corsica for Italy."

The Count of Turin, cousin of King Vittorio Emanuele, recognized and cheered by a Milan crowd, made a brief speech expressing sympathy with young Fascists parading to the cry of "Tunisia."

In Rome, the demonstration reached its climax when Provincial Fascist Party Secretary Andrea Ippolito answered a crowd's shouts of "Tunisia" by declaring: "There is no need of talking of Tunisia—we will go there."

Troops Guard Embassy

Several hundred students agitating in support of Italian claims to French-controlled territory were turned back by police before they reached the French embassy in Rome. Regular infantry troops reinforced the police guard.

In other cities French consulates were the scenes of demonstrations.

Newspapers concentrated on accounts of anti-Italian demonstrations in Tunisia and Corsica.

There were stories of "Vandalism," "Attempts to Attack Italian Consulates," and "Aggression of All Kinds" in connection with the French demonstration Sunday. All newspapers, on the other hand, described Fascist displays as an "orderly, disciplined reaction."

Chamberlain Quoted

These accounts shared space with Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the British House of Commons yesterday that he had received assurances the Italian government "did not associate" itself with territorial demonstrations against France.

The press described Chamberlain's statement as showing the failure of anti-Fascist attempts to sabotage the British-Italian friendship agreement.

In the midst of the Tunisian tension the Italian cruiser Raimondo Montecuccoli, which had been in Adriatic waters, was called back to the Mediterranean.

Japanese Bar Yangtze to Aliens But Let 5 Leave

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, Dec. 6.—Foreigners other than Japanese will not be allowed to proceed to Hankow or other Yangtze River ports even if upriver transportation is available, a Japanese spokesman announced today.

The reason advanced was that "the Yangtze upstream area is vital to Japanese military operations."

Five American civilians are returning from Hankow to Shanghai aboard the American gunboat Luzon, arriving Thursday. The spokesman explained the Japanese were permitting foreigners to leave, but not to go to Hankow.

Why foreigners returning from Hankow do not interfere with military operations and travelers going to Hankow do interfere was not explained.

Gandhi Supports Arabs in Palestine

Bombay, Dec. 6 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, said today German Jews should insist on staying in Germany and criticized the plan of making Palestine a national home for Jews.

He wrote in his weekly newspaper that "if ever there could be a justifiable war in the name of humanity, a war against Germany—to prevent the wanton persecution of a whole race—would be completely justified."

However, he added:

"Palestine belongs to the Arabs in the same sense that England belongs to the English, and it is wrong and inhuman to impose Jews on the Arabs."

leadership in a smuggling plot and Lavine as the recipient of part of 80,000 marks ($24,000) which the two allegedly contracted to deposit dollars for in a Zurich, Switzerland, bank.

Graduate of G. W. U.

A police agent provocateur, describing himself as a half-Jew seeking to sell in the United States the manuscript for a cancer film, was reported to have made the arrest. He described himself, it is alleged, as the friend of a man wishing to have dollars deposited abroad against marks.

Lavine and Albert allegedly accepted the first installment of 1,000 marks.

Dr. Lavine was a graduate of George Washington University and practiced in Mount Rainier before leaving last December for Vienna to study ophthalomology in a famous hospital there. He had been a physician for the Bladensburg Rescue Squad and had performed the autopsy in the mystery murder of Corrina Loring a few years ago.

Dr. Albert was a native New Yorker and also was doing advanced study of medicine in Vienna.

Sister's Letters Censored

A sister, Ann Lavine went to Vienna a few months ago to seek to obtain his release, but members of the family here have heard few facts from her. Censorship to which her letters have been subjected are credited for lack of information.

Friends here and abroad have worked to raise a $10,000 release fund.

Dr. Lavine maintained his office at 3628 Thirty-fourth street, where a brother, Harold, is a dentist. News of his arrest was kept from his mother, Mrs. Sarah Lavine, for several weeks because of her poor health.

Taft Says Dictators Usurp Church's Place

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 6 (AP).—A lay speaker told the Federal Council of Churches today leaders in totalitarian states were usurping the place of the church in the minds of their people.

Senator-elect Taft, of Cincinnati, said the dictators maintain their power by adopting and converting to their purpose the "key things of the church," which he said are leadership and community organization.

official interpretation of the order, but obtained no definite information.

Plea to U. S.

The Jeudisches Nachrichtenblatt called its plan "constructive" and said other nations "would certainly follow suit" if the United States took the lead by giving 100,000 of Germany's half million Jews a haven for a time.

"If states possessing the possibilities were to decide to grant provisional refuge to Jews from Germany," the semiweekly said, "the transfer from temporary shelters into the countries of final destination could be executed according to carefully considered plans."

[The secret police is compelling all imprisoned Jews to sign pledges that they will leave the Reich immediately before releasing them from concentration camps, the United Press reported.

[Because it is impossible for thousands of them to obtain foreign visas within such a short time, it was indicated that many would be thrown back into concentration camps when the time limit expires and they have been unable to migrate.—Editor's note.]

Rumania Arrests Sons of Leaders

Bucharest, Dec. 6 (AP).—Rumania's relentless suppression of the terrorist Fascist Iron Guard led police today into the homes of some leading citizens of Csrnauti, where the president of a military court, Col. Cristescku, was wounded by an Iron Guard bullet.

Among alleged conspirators arrested tonight were the son of an army colonel, the son of a school director, a divinity student accused of setting fire to stores of Jewish merchants and an intermediate school professor charged with excusing students from studies so they could perform Iron Guard assignments in terrorism.

Plot to Kill Yugoslav Ruler Found in N. Y.

Prince Paul Leaves England for Paris As Assassins Sail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 6.—Details of an alleged plot by New York terrorists to assassinate Prince Paul, chief regent of Yugoslavia, came to light here today as the prince, reportedly warned of the danger, slipped quietly out of England under armed guard.

Officials here and in London publicly denied the plot, saying the Prince had intended to leave England today anyway, but it was established that chance information picked up by New York detectives had been deemed important enough to be sent to the Department of State and thence to Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

Three terrorists are believed to have sailed for England on the Queen Mary. The London Daily Express, in a story today, announced that Scotland Yard operatives would search the ship on its arrival tomorrow in Plymouth, England, to see if they can find the suspects from the descriptions supplied by New York police.

Reaches Paris Safely

[The Associated Press reported from Paris that the Prince and his wife had arrived safely today, and would see Foreign Minister Bonnet and President Lebrun tomorrow. No special precautions were taken by French officials, other than the usual measures to protect foreign dignitaries.—Editor's note.]

Detectives of the criminal alien squad discovered the reported plot about two weeks ago when checking upon reports that a Balkan revolution group, said to be Croatians, named "Djexich," was meeting in a cafe near Ninth avenue and West Forty-first street.

Detectives familiar with Balkan tangues donned longshoremen's clothes and idled in the cafe. The alleged revolutionists passed most of their time playing cards, between deals making remarks about the conspiracy against Prince Paul, who is considered the ruler of Yugoslavia, pending the maturity of King Peter, now only 15.

Old King Assassinated

Peter's father, King Alexander, with Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, was assassinated by a Croat in Marceilles in October, 1934.

The 20 conspirators agreed that the removal of Prince Paul was desirable; the only question was the time and place.

Three of their number were chosen by lot and sent to Europe to study the situation.

The detectives then learned that the three chosen men were to sail on the Queen Mary for England, where Prince Paul and his wife had been visiting the Duke and Duchess of Kent. The prince's wife, the former Princess Olga of Greece, is a sister of the Duchess.

while the Kellogg Pact bound its signatories to renounce war as an instrument of national policy, the Franco-German declaration merely obligates the two countries to join in consultations with a view to smoothing out their differences, but, by implication, reserving the right to resort to war as an ultimate policy.

Keynote Is "Peace"

Ribbentrop, making his first public statement in France, sounded the keynote of his visit when he said: "I have come for peace between France and Germany."

In radio broadcasts this evening Bonnet and Ribbentrop pointed out the significance of the treaty.

Said the French foreign minister complacently: "I congratulate myself highly on signing this Franco-German declaration which, by solemnly recognizing the existing frontiers, put an end to a long historic debate and opens the path to a co-operation which must forward the conviction that there does not exist between the two countries any difference of a nature to put in doubt the peaceable basis of their relations."

Ribbentrop declared: "I too am convinced that today's Franco-German declaration will serve to remove historic prejudies and . . . will find not only the united approbation of the leaders, but also of the peoples of our two countries."

Seldom has a distinguished statesman visiting the capital of another country received so chilly a reception as did Ribbentrop today.

The crowd along Ribbentrop's route from the station to the Hotel Crillon stood stony silent. Not a Nazi flag was to be seen anywhere.

Thousands of steel-helmeted mobile guards with fixed bayonets lined the streets to protect the German foreign minister.

"Mein Kampf" Belied

Berlin, Dec. 6 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, in delegating his foreign minister to sign a friendship pact with France today, reversed the position he outlined in his autobiographical book, "Mein Kampf" ("My Struggle")—the bible of nazilism.

(In Paris, several newspapers reported that a "high official" of the French foreign office said the French had been assured Hitler would delete many attacks upon France from the next edition of "Mein Kampf" as a result of the accord.'

"The implacable and deadly enemy of the Georman people is and ever will be France," Hitler wrote on page 669 of the authorized current German edition, as translated unofficially.

The German press stated unanimously and with emphasis today that the new pact in no way detracted from the solidity of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The mouthpiece of the foreign office, Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, asserted:

"It is the authoritarian states, which so many accuse of aggressiveness, that are seeking to bridge over differences with others," the organ commented.

(Virginio Gayda, frequently the spokesman for Premier Mussolini, declared in Il Giornale D'Italia that signing of the French-German accord showed that hostility toward Germany in democratic countries as an outgrowth of Nazi anti-Semitism was "only the produce of deceit and was not accompanied by any profound feeling.")

Daladier Wins Vote Test on Strike Policy

Committee of Deputies Upholds Iron-Handed Methods to End Tie-ups

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 6.—The Daladier government won a clear-cut victory over Socialist and Communist opposition today in the first Parliamentary committee test of its firm policy in dealing with strikes.

The important finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies voted approval, 26 to 18, of the government's fight against the strikes, in which it has employed military requisition, discharge and arrest against the strikers.

Reinforced by this political support, the government proceeded relentlessly in its drive to end the strikes.

Navy crews went aboard the liner Paris at Le Havre, replacing striking sailors. The navy men sailed the vessel out of the harbor under cover of darkness tonight to pick up passengers tomorrow at Cherbourg.

Plans were made to man other strike-bound vessels similarly in the event this first sailing from the disrupted port failed to break the shipping strike.

Work was returning to normal in metal plants and other factories where the General Confederation of Labor's one-day general strike call for last Wednesday was followed.

Belgian Chamber Supports Premier

Brussels, Dec. 6 (AP).—Socialist Premier Spaak won a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies tonight on Spanish insurgent policy and thereby averted the threatened resignation of his coalition cabinet.

The vote was 110 to 49 with 21 deputies abstaining.

The premier's plan to exchange commercial agents with the Spanish insurgents had been under attack.

Spending Cut Believed Aim Of Morgenthau

Treasury Is Reported Opposing Eccles Plan; Would Reduce Deficit

By the Associated Press.

A usually well-informed person indicated yesterday that the Treasury was urging a conservative spending policy on President Roosevelt for next year in opposition to the spending views of Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board.

Secretary Morgenthau hinted at this disagreement Monday when asked about a speech in which Eccles advised against premature reduction of Federal expenditures.

Two Men, Two Views?

"Governor Eccles is chairman of the Federal Reserve and I am Secretary of the Treasury," said the tall "gentleman farmer" from New York.

A person close to Morgenthau, however, disclosed that the Secretary, while not expecting a balanced budget next year in view of the projected national defense program, wants to reduce the deficit which is scheduled to reach $4,000,000,000 this fiscal year.

The Treasury head and his new tax adviser, Undersecretary John W. Hanes, a recent recruit from a Wall Street brokerage house, are known to believe that steps to wipe out the deficit would help business by heightening "confidence."

Eccles Fears "Relapse"

Eccles, a one-time missionary who became one of the leading bankers of Utah, argued in New York Friday that it was too soon to cut down the extra public purchasing power created by deficit spending and that a premature expenditure reduction might cause another business relapse.

He said one of the causes of the recession which started late in 1937 was the sharp decline in the Federal deficit after 1936, when the soldiers' bonus was paid. When national income rises from the 1938 estimate of $65,000,000,000 to about $88,000,000,000, he asserted, the budget would balance itself through increased revenue.

Hazen Urges $200,000 Farm For Inebriates

He Instructs Ruhland To Survey Similar Places Elsewhere

A proposal to establish a model farm for inebriates costing $200,000 was revived yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Following a conference with District officials recently, Commissioner Hazen said he had instructed Health Officer George C. Ruhland to survey similar institutions in other cities.

"If I receive a favorable report from the health officer I will renew all efforts for the establishment of the farm," Hazen said.

Under the proposal part of the 3,000 acres at the Occoquan Workhouse would be set aside for the farm and all persons sentenced in the District courts on charges of drunkenness would be sent to the farm.

"There must be something we can do for the poor unfortunate fellow who just seems to have the craving for drink," Hazen declared. "It doesn't seem to do much good sending him to jail."

Hazen said the inebriates would be under the supervision of a medical officer and would not be released until a competent medical board believed the man cured.

Hazen proposed this project about four years ago. Last year the Budget Bureau disapproved the legislative measure which would have provided for the farm.

Hazen said the farm would be available for poor drunkards whose families wanted a commitment.

Williams, NYA Director, Urges U. S. Youth To Broaden and Consolidate the New Deal

By the United Press.

Ithaca, N. Y. Dec. 6.—Aubrey Williams, executive director of the National Youth Administration, tonight called upon the Nation's young men and women to expand and consolidate New Deal legislative gains in order to bring about permanent economic recovery.

Addressing the student body of Cornell University, he said that youth's problem is to "make workable this social legislation which they have had the privilege of witnessing in the making."

"Conceived in haste to cet the urgent demands of an emergency, it was inevitable that some of these liberal measures should run up against the resistance of those who fear change," he said. "Youth must find a way not only of fitting these measures into the framework of our form of government, but of developing and expanding them so that their benefits will ever widen and spread.

"Youth knows that our ideals of freedom and equality must reach all to be real."

He said the "more generous and thoughtful part of the youth in America has attached its social and economic thought and effort to one central purpose which can be described as the search for a peaceful, orderly and democratic solution to the tragic economic confusions and miseries of our industrial arrangement."

Until basic economic problems facing the entire country have been solved, youth cannot look confidently forward to employment in private industry, he said. For its own protection, he added, it must co-operate in efforts to raise the Nation's living standard, buying power, income and productivity.

Movie Stars Involved in Smuggling Plot

Gracie Allen, George Burns, Haled Before Lauer Grand Jury

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—A Federal grand jury looked toward Hollywood and radio broadcasting studios today in quest of more information about an alleged smuggling plot that led to the indictment yesterday of Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, socially prominent wife of a State Supreme Court justice.

A list of 100 names famous in the entertainment world, found on Mrs. Lauer's alleged co-conspirator, Albert N. Chaperau, self-styled Nicaraguan commercial attache, formed a background for the widening investigation.

Among those who already have appeared before the grand jury, which accuses the mysterious Chaperau of smuggling Paris style creations into this country, are George Burns and Gracie Allen, Jack Pearl, the comedian, and Wallace Ford, movie director.

Jack Benny Mentioned

Mentioned as possible future witnesses are Jack Benny, radio comedian; Joseph Moskowitz, film executive; Ralph Hitz, hotel man, and Dr. Noel Pallais, Nicaraguan consul.

Mrs. Lauer, whose Park avenue apartment was raided several weeks ago by customs men seeking smuggled finery, was given "a reasonable time" to surrender to the United States attorney's office. Chaperau has been held in $20,000 bail since October 26.

Chaperau's attorney, David Garrison Berger, submitted an affidavit denying all the smuggling charges and citing an incident at a dinner party in the Lauers' apartment October 21, which, Chaperau asserted, resulted in the charges.

"All the guests had recently returned from Europe," the affidavit said, "and the table conversation was about the European crisis.

Maid Defended Hitler

"Hitler was roundly denounced by all present.

"Rosa Weber, the maid, while serving dinner assisted by the butler, stood at the entrance of the dining room and in the midst of our conversation about Hitler, made the following speech:

"'Ladies and gentlemen, I am a true German. I love Adolf Hitler. If you don't stop talking against Hitler, I will stop serving the dinner right now. It is up to you.'"

Chaperau's affidavit said the guests were "speechless" and that the Lauers instantly discharged her.

The affidavit asserted that before leaving, Rosa Weber turned on the Lauers and told them she would "get even" with them. It was on her information that Federal agents subsequently raided the Lauer apartment.

Faces Fine of $25,000

Mrs. Lauer is charged with conspiring to smuggle $1,833 worth of gowns and hats into this country. The indictment asserted Chaperau brought in the goods. Examination of his luggage was waived when he represented himself as a commercial attache of the Nicaraguan consulate.

If convicted on all counts, Mrs. Lauer could be fined $25,000 and sentenced to a maximum of eight years in prison.

Chaperau could be sentenced to 24 years in prison and fined $44,000.

Justice Lauer issued a statement blaming "the trouble" on "the exaggerated and distorted story" of the discharged maid.

Slightly more than a year ago Justice Lauer settled earlier difficulties between his wife and custom officials by paying the Government $10,400 in duties and penalties on apparel Mrs. Lauer had failed to declare after returning from France.

Roosevelt Hopes to Avoid Tax Boost to Pay for Arms

needs should be raised by taxes, and replied that he had not reached that matter yet. He said that as a general matter he felt such needs should be paid for as-you-go, since they are not self-liquidating.

Then, making clear that he was not committed to such a plan, he pointed out that some countries, among them Sweden, divide their governmental expenditures into three general categories:

First—Actual cost of running the government, all of which should be raised by taxation;

Second—Expenditures that are absolutely self-liquidating, such as Boulder Dam, which will be paid for ultimately through water and power contracts; and

Third—Expenditures that will so increase the national income that there will be a resulting return of the money through the years.

He added that while he felt defense should be paid for as we go along, it might not be necessary to increase taxes to accomplish that goal.

When a reporter said there was a War Department report that this country was far behind technically in the matter of airplane manufacture the Chief Executive said he had seen no such report and that he doubted there was any technical lagging in this country.

He said, in response to other questions, that he knew of no plans for the Civil Aeronautics Authority to train fliers who could serve as a reserve aviation force, but emphasized that no decision had been reached on whether the training should be wholly in the hands of the Army and Navy.

Asked whether the defense program would cover natural resources such as metals, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative, but pointed out that the War Department already has called for the acquisition of reserve supplies of such essential materials as manganese, nickel and tin, which this country lacks.

In infectious good humor at his meeting with the newspaper people, Mr. Roosevelt laughed heartily at attempts to lead him into discussions of subjects on which he remained steadfastly uncommunicative.

Of his talk earlier in the day with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State; Hugh R. Wilson, William Phillips and William C. Bullitt, Ambassadors, respectively, to Germany, Italy, and France, he said they were continuing conversations and there was no news on them. The President talked with the ambassadors regarding persecution of minorities in Europe while he was at Warm Springs, Ga., from which he returned to the Capital yesterday morning.

Inquiry Sought in $90,000,000 Power Deal Made 'to Pull PWA Chestnuts Out of the Fire'

Bridges

granted $20,190,000 to these units—the Loup River public power district and the central Nebraska public power and irrigation district.

Liens on Revenue

Under the change, which Ickes said opened the way to purchase of the private utilities, the Government's bonds would be secured by a first lien on revenue from the districts' hydro plants instead of by a first lien on all income of the districts, as formerly.

Bonds to be issued to private banking houses to finance the purchases would be secured by a first lien on income from the distribution facilities purchased.

Bancamerica-Blair Corporation announced in New York Friday it expected to handle the bonds.

The Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co., a subsidiary of the United Light & Power Co., has pending before the Federal Power Commission a request for authority to sell its electrical properties in Nebraska to the two districts for $20,195,991. The price, according to the application, was recommended by J. D. Ross, appraiser, after an audit of the company's books. Ross, according to PWA officials, is a former associate of Myers in public power ventures in the Pacific Northwest.

3-Point Inquiry Proposed

Bridges said Congress should investigate these points:

Whether PWA, in approving the change, acted within the law and with due propriety.

Whether Guy C. Myers is associated with Ross in the Bonneville, Oreg., project.

Why PWA did not ask Congress for specific authorization for its action.

The third large State-formed, PWA-financed power unit in Nebraska, the Platte Valley Public Power & Irrigation District, was not included in the bond indenture change, although it joined the other two districts last May 11 in their request for it. The Platte Valley District, recipient of $8,648,000 in loans and $2,580,000 in grants from the PWA, has been closed down for several months due to breakage of a siphon. PWA officials said it might apply later for an indenture change so it could participate in the utility purchase.

Final Details Pushed

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Investment bankers worked today on the final details for a public offering of bonds of two Nebraska public power districts to raise funds for completion of a $20,000,000 purchase of electrical properties from the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co.

It was planned to market the bonds through a syndicate headed by the Bancamerica-Blair Corporation.

The underwriters were hopeful the financing could be carried out within the next week or two. However, it was said plans had not reached the point where the price of the bonds, the interest rate and other details could be announced.

Suspended Police Clerk Seeks to Halt Alimony

Howard E. Crawford, suspended chief property clerk of the Police Department, yesterday filed a motion in District Court to permit him temporarily to halt alimony payments to Mrs. Anna R. Crawford.

He claimed that until his status in the Police Department was restored, he had no means with which to comply with the alimony decree handed down by the court exactly five years ago—December 6, 1933. The payments amount to $37 per month.

His Daughter Kidnap Target, Says Chemist

Mary Brown Seized By Error, He Thinks; Holds Revenge Motive

Belief that the kidnapers of Mary Brown actually intended to abduct his own daughter was voiced last night by Dr. Victor Birckner, Government chemist, whose home lies opposite the Brown farm in Oxon Hill, Md.

In an exclusive interview with The Post, Dr. Birckner declared:

"There is a good possibility that the kidnapers meant to get my daughter, Alma.

"There are plenty of reasons for my believing so. I can think of persons who might seek revenge against me through my daughter."

The United States Public Health Service scientist would not elaborate his suspicions.

Theory Supported

It was pointed out, however, that several circumstances tended to strengthen this theory—one which was being investigated by private detectives, called into the case by the father of Mary Brown, 18-year-old Notre Dame Academy student, who was seized last Wednesday by three men and held captive for 30 hours.

These factors were:

Alma, an Anacostia High School student, walked home daily from the bus station along Box road, scene of the abduction. Mary on the other hand, seldom walked the lonely road home.

Used Same Road

Only several minutes before the kidnapers seized Mary, while her 15-year-old sister escaped by running off into the woods, Alma had passed by the same piece of road.

On two different occasions last week Alma had been accosted by two men in an auto.

The girls of approximately the same age, slightly resembled one another.

The kidnapers, it was observed, released Mary, after beating and starving her, on the Birckner estate.

Woman Slugged

Meanwhile, Washington and Maryland police last night were hunting a youth who brutally assaulted a woman only a few miles from the scene of the Mary Brown kidnaping.

The assailant slugged Mrs. Edith Fellner, 30, of Camp Springs, Md., over the head with a blunt instrument, inflicting severe injuries. He then escaped by stealing his victim's automobile.

The assault occurred outside the home of Mrs. Fellner, only 3 miles from the kidnap scene.

George Biggs, a neighbor, rushed Mrs. Fellner to a private physician in Anacostia. Her husband, Sidney Fellner, was at work in a Washington garage at the time of the assault.

In Hyattsville last night the board of directors of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce approved proposed legislation to increase the county force by 18 men, including 15 police. Both the kidnaping and the assault last night were committed in the county.

Machine Guns Asked

The legislation, proposed by a committee headed by R. M. Watkins, of College Heights, calls for at least one machine gun and one gas gun for each of the stations.

Maj. Elmer F. Munshower, superintendent of Maryland State police, who is personally leading the police investigation, declared last night all tips and clews had been followed through, with no results. He admitted that as little was known about the three kidnapers as the day Mary was abducted—last Wednesday.

has not, however, been able to find work of a nature that would enable her to give some time to the care of the two younger sons.

The social service agency handling the plight of Family Q is making every effort to get the 18-year-old boy into the next CCC enrollment. Away from home, there will be one less mouth to feed and regular funds coming back to the family every month. Every effort also is being made to secure part-time work for Mrs. Q, with her landlady taking charge of the youngest boy when necessary.

Through kindly intervention and help of friends in only slightly better circumstances, the Q Family itself has, until now, staved off eviction, supplied some food and clothing. But funds are desperately needed to carry the family for three months when, it is believed, the ultimate solution to the problem will have been worked out. Amount needed, $75.

Presidential Boom Begins For Garner

west Texas to attend, but political friends have a ready answer to the question of whether he would accept a Presidential nomination if it were forthcoming.

"Well," one old-timer put it, "he hasn't said yes—but he hasn't said no."

"John Nance hasn't shirked a public duty yet," his friends say, "and he won't shirk this one if it comes along."

Whole County "Enrolled"

Every man, woman and child in Red River County automatically became a member of the club, announced the permanent chairman at today's rally, Dr. Nowlin Watson, of Clarksville, Tex.

"If anyone in Red River County doesn't want to be a member of the John Garner Club you'll have to see me and explain," said Chairman Watson. "As it is, you're all in now."

Relatives present included Garner's brother, Jesse; two sisters, Mrs. Maud Blair and Mrs. R. J. Wright, of Detroit; a niece, Mrs. Fred Moore, of Idabel, Okla., and two nephews, John and James.

They set aright the Texas centennial commission, which had erected nearby a marker designating the cabin as the birthplace of the Vice President. All agreed the cabin in which he was born had been torn down years ago.

Garner was born November 22, 1868, and spent his early boyhood tramping 6 miles daily to and from his country school, doing a full round of chores on the farm, and riding miles of fence. As he grew older he found time for baseball, organizing a team and playing the boys from Reed Tank, Blossom Prairie, and other northeastern Texas communities.

News of Capital Night Clubs

Star event tomorrow evening will be the advent of Paul Kain and orchestra "raising Cain," and in rhythm, at Wardman's Metronome Room.

The Kain orchestra is exactly the same unit that plied up the swing decibels so gally in Metronome last season. Since then they have played an extended engagement in Rockefeller Center, won the unqualified approval of Manhattan. The seven lads play a total of 26 instruments. Maestro Paul is a master of the entire reed family, goes especially dynamic on the clarinet and saxophone. Bienvenue, Paul — and happy Metronom-ing!

The coiner of the phrase, "poetry in motion," should see it come to life in the dancing of Fontana and Bettine at the Shoreham this week. Their waltz and tango are studies in pure grace, executed to very difficult and technical music. There are no acrobatics, no spinning-top style, no swinging the lady around by her left foot—just an incredibly smooth velocity of changing poise and silken steps. Fontana, long known as a great master of the ballroom dance, has in Bettine a partner said to be the peer of Marjorie Moss, with whom he first won fame.

Earl Lawrence continues into his fourth week at the Shoreham. His splendid barytone is the perfect foil for the Fontanadancing.

This afternoon at 5: You'll be very much alive, if you're attending the Hour Glass Style Show. Pretties for Southern wear by Alexis de Paris. Also the Alexis specialties in angora which you can wear here and now.

That terrapin and wild turkey dinner at the Pall Mall Room tomorrow evening promises to be also a feast of music. Radio's pets, "Three Maids on a Mike," will croon in the manner complicated. Folk songs of foreign lands will be presented by Nina Tarasova, Russian soprano. Ah-h-h! and there'll be a "mystery tenor," whose voice is said to be as smooth and golden as Chef Jarrin's mayonnaise.

Ringside Movies: At the Lounge Riviera: Jane Irving, chic Navy girl, caroling the new tunes to friends at her table. Doing so well that the Three Swingsters induced her to step up to the piano and really swing out . . . In the Mayflower Lounge: Dr. Ricardo Olivera, new Argentine Ambassador to Mexico, who is visiting in Washington for a few days while en route to his new post. Also Michigan's Attorney General Raymond Starr deep in discussion with another important-looking Michigander. Perhaps they were talking about Attorney General Starr's appearance yesterday before the Supreme Court . . . In Shar-Zad: Harrison Jewett, of New York, hosting a party—all vastly enjoying the Sande Williams tricks in music . . . At L'Escargot: A party from the Rumanian Legation diverting their attention betwen the hors d'oeuvre and the melodies of Sasha and Ralon . . . At the Anchor Room: Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas with George Marshall (no, not the Redskins' owner, but the great-grandson of Chief Justice Marshall).

Evelyn Nations, Cafe Caprice's beauteous triple-threat entertainer (she sings, pianos and accordions), hails from Lampasas, Tex., where she grew up on her grandpa's 8,000-acre ranch. Evelyn says she can rope a calf, but never learned to milk a cow.

Lousanna Rudd, now making melody with Leo, at Mayfair, has two special distinctions. She's the tallest, also one of the most delightful girl entertainers, who's come to our town lately. Louanna has just finished a 7½-month engagement at the Blue Mirror Club in Baltimore. She sang over NBC for 4½ years. Her warbling is smooth as honey—and just as sweet, but with spicy rhythm.

It's oopsy-hoopsy! at the Lotus this week. The hoop-rolling act of Wilfred and Mae is one of the sharpest and brightest novelties you'll see this season. Also it's notable for perfectly timed comedy. Wilfred is one of the Five Gregory Brothers of circus and vaudeville fame. He's been rolling hoops for 37 years, ever since he was 12 years old. Some of the hoops he uses are 30 years old. The two young people in the act are his son and daughter, Wilfred, jr., and Mildred. And Mae? Mae is Mrs. Gregory, who sits on the sidelines now, but used to be a great hoop-roller herself, but whose name Wilfred still uses with the act. Pretty sentiment. The whole Wilfred and Mae family travel and live in a motor trailer.

Lyde Swygert, swingtime sweetie of the Rainbow Room, has gotten two new verses for "Old Man Mose." These help a lot in doing those five or six encores that Rainbow Room patrons always demand on this number. And it sure is a treat, at that, to see Lyde, demure in white taffeta, shouting, "Ol' Man Mose is daid!" in her best Carolina accent.

Marion Dawn's debut at Bamboo Gardens and the shining "Jimmy Walker's Revue" are a double value diversion item. Marion is in beautiful voice, looks more stunning than ever in gold brocade touched up with black velvet.

Jimmy Walker, long featured at New York's Casa Manana, does a fine impersonation of James Barton, imitates a flock of other celebrities. D'Aubre (looks like Doug Fairbanks, jr.) and Renee do some startling adagio. Brilliant in both control dancing and magic is the charmling Dolly Reckless. A parasol finale by the beauty chorus offers a study in green.

Madrillon's Johnny Shaw asserts that the best band in New York is Count Basie's 16-piece outfit playing at the Famous Door.

Ray Beck, singer in the Uptown cocktail lounge, used to be a jockey. He rode for the Preston Burch stables at most of the big Eastern tracks. But he decided to be a singer before he "lost his bug" (weight allowance).

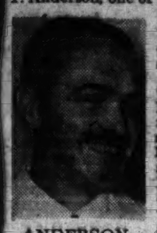
Paul Anderson Kills Himself; Noted Reporter

'Usefulness at End,' He Tells Maid; Roosevelt Grieved

A certificate of suicide was issued late yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the case of Paul Y. Anderson, one of America's greatest reporters, who died at 3:55 a. m. in Emergency Hospital.



ANDERSON

At about the time Coroner MacDonald was making the announcement, following an autopsy at the District Morgue, President Roosevelt was saying at a White House press conference that Anderson was an old friend, a grand fellow, and that he was grieved by his death.

Attorney General Homer Cummings and other high officials as well as Anderson's colleagues in the newspaper profession, joined in praising him.

Brief funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today at Gawler's funeral chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, fater which the body will be shipped to Knoxville.

Three close friends, representing Government, labor and the newspaper profession, will speak—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska; John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and George R. Holmes, chief of the Washington bureau of the International News Service.

Pallbearers will be William C. Murphy, Leon Henderson, Robert S. Allen, Donald R. Richberg, Ben H. Lambe and Alexander F. Jones.

Anderson, a brilliant star in the Washington journalistic firmament for 15 of his 45 years, first as a representative of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and later of the St. Louis Star-Times, took an overdose of sleeping tablets at his home, 4980 Quebec street northwest. His third wife, the former Katherine Lanea, an actress, whom he married a year ago last August, was in Chicago.

High strung, sensitive and deeply emotional, Anderson had been despondent for some time.

Won Pulitzer Prize

Anderson, who won the Pulitzer beth (Haynes) Anderson. His prize in 1928 for a series of stories that reopened the Teapot Dome oil scandals, was born August 29, 1893, in Knoxville, Tenn., the son of William Holston Anderson and Elizafather, a labor leader, was killed in a plant accident when Paul was 3.

When he was 12, Paul went to work as a copy boy on the old Knoxville Tribune (now the Journal). His formal education was limited to high school, although he took some special courses in the Washington University in St. Louis.

After working as a cub reporter in Knoxville, Anderson went to St. Louis, where in 1914 he joined the staff of the Post-Dispatch. He exposed graft and civic corruption in East St. Louis.

On July 2, 1917, he covered the race riots in East St. Louis, in which 34 colored and eight white men were killed. He helped send 20 of the killers to prison.

Anderson once spent a night in jail with a narcotic addict to obtain a confession in a murder. Another time, dressed as a poolroom loafer, he exposed a narcotic ring by making purchases with marked money.

A Congressional committee said that he "ran a daily risk of assassination and rendered invaluable public service by his exposures."

After the riots, Anderson spent two years as an editorial writer. He came here in 1923.

He covered the Loeb-Leopold trial in Chicago in 1924, the La Follette campaign in the same year and the Scopes "monkey trial" the following year. In 1926 he presented evidence to the House Judiciary Committee which resulted in the impeachment of Federal Judge George W. English. Then came his stories on the oil scandals that won him the Pulitzer Prize.

Anderson was a close friend of the late Huey Long. His other close friends included Senator George W. Norris, Justice Louis D. Brandeis, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., John L. Lewis, and Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

Wrote for Periodicals

In addition to his newspaper work, Anderson wrote for numerous periodicals, particularly The Nation. One of his recent articles for this publication was titled "The Greatest Managing Editor." It was a tribute to O. K. Bovard, retiring managing editor of the Post-Dispatch, who had reluctantly but angrily let him go from that newspaper.

At the time he severed relations with the Post-Dispatch, Anderson was receiving $16,000 a year.

A scoop which Anderson scored on a motion picture showing the Memorial Day riots in Chicago led to Anderson's third marriage. He was invited to Atlantic City to receive a gold medal from the Headliners Club for this story, and there he met Miss Katherine Lane, 27, who was starring in a dramatization given by the club. Anderson saw her, and a whirlwind courtship followed.

They were married August 30, by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Holmes, 2338 Massachusetts avenue.

Anderson was the father of two boys by a previous marriage—Paul, 23, and Kenneth, 21.

Attorney General Cummings, in his tribute to Anderson, said:

"The death of Anderson is a loss to the liberal press. His courage and ability as a journalist enabled him to cut through the crust of appearances and disclose truth beneath the news. The thousands who have followed his able interpretation of current events during the past 25 years are deeply saddened by his passing."

The following committee has been appointed by Harold Brayman, president of the National Press Club, to represent the club at the funeral.

Robert S. Allen, Norman W. Baxter, James R. Brackett, Raymond P. Brandt, Erwin D. Canham, W. Turner Catledge, Marquis W. Childs, Raymond Clapper, Stephen T. Early, John H. Edwards, Morris D. Ervin, J. Fred Essary, J. V. FitzGerald, Earl Godwin, Charles G. Gridley, Arthur Hachten, Frank A. Hall, Leon Henderson, Raymond Z. Heale, George R. Holmes, Hugh Johnson, Ben Hall Lambe, Paul H. Mallon, Maury Maverick, Lowell Mellett, Charles Michelson, Joseph L. Miller, W. C. Murphy, jr., Joyce O'Hara, Sam A. O'Neal, Drew Pearson, J. S. S. Richardson, Kirke L. Simpson, Thomas L. Stokes, Bascom N. Timmons, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Franklyn Waltman, Lyle C. Wilson and John O'Donnell.

Kettering, Before Monopoly Inquiry, Predicts 50 Years of Unprecedented Progress for U. S.

Monopoly

but in need of improvements "and these should be left to the people who work in that field to work out."

He said the General Motors consulting research laboratory, which he heads, and others like it were primarily concerned with the difficult problem of projecting and developing new industries and "getting an industry up to a profit and loss basis." He called it a form of insurance maintained by industry to keep abreast technologically.

"Running in Circles"

He reiterated he was "not proud" of the record when he considered men and materials not working, and resources and opportunities unused.

In a subsequent interview, he told The Post:

"We have got to develop our industrial children. The World War upset us. We started running in circles. But we will get back. We are just learning how to do the job again and in the next 50 years you will see much greater progress than we have made in the last 50."

Kettering told the committee that the day of the individual inventor was passing; that America was in the transition stage from the individual inventor to the group inventor and "I doubt whether the patent thing is involved in this."

Problem of Correlation

He said inventions made by industrial laboratories were generally the work of large technical staffs rather than a one man job, and the problem was one of correlation. Patents, he said, are taken out by his company and where special rewards are given, they are passed on to the entire laboratory. "I don't think I ever took out a personal patent," he said.

"If an invention is going to be of any use, it has to be translated into a product," he said, contending that companies rather than individuals were generally best able to bear the costs and risks of failure, which he said were greater than 100 to 1.

Earlier General Motors' President Knudsen similarly told the committee that "anyone who invents anything" had to pass through three stages, invention, development and production, before his product could be profitably produced.

O'Mahoney's Question

O'Mahoney asked Kettering who profited chiefly from an invention, the inventor, the corporate promoter or the public? The witness replied that "if the public doesn't benefit, neither one of the other two will."

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, seeking a legislative cure for monopoly control of patents, questioned all witnesses on two "suggestions" he said might be considered. They included a proposal for a dual patent policy, providing different treatment for large and small industry. Knudsen said he did not see how such a policy could be worked out or applied.

In turn, Arnold suggested to Kettering that antitrust laws, now directed at combinations and mergers in restraint of trade might be applied to patents when used as a legal device to promote monopolies.

Sumners Fears "Mockery"

Near conclusion of the hearings Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, compared the committee's "research" task to Kettering's industrial invention problems.

Said Sumners:

"A good many of us here at the Capitol appreciate the fact that the time has come, if we are to preserve free Government in this country that we have got to discover the natural laws which govern governments and how we can work in accord with them. If we cannot preserve this Government, all these big fortunes that are being built up and all these mechanical inventions will be a mockery to these people . . .

"Doctors will try out a new idea on a guinea pig first and they will be pretty cautious. Of course we are not; but there have been people connected with government who want to try the whole idea on the Government first . . . and they expect to have a diploma because it didn't make the guinea pig sick."

"Fragile" Says King

An unusual symposium ensued, in which Kettering said "we must learn how to set up a one-cylinder Government and try that out," and Senator King (Democrat), Utah, volunteered that democratic government was "fragile" and "the most difficult thing to maintain in the midst of communism, socialism and dictatorship."

In the end, O'Mahoney summed up automobile patent practices in a statement declaring they have not been used to suppress competition, nor to develop monopolies or to make money from royalties, but in general largely for protection against infringement suits.

"While the testimony of these automobile manufacturers is highly persuasive," said O'Mahoney, "observers should not deduce that their methods are necessarily ones which might be applied to all of American industry, nor that automobile practice is entirely perfect.

In earlier testimoney, Milton Tibbets, vice president of Packard Motor Co., defended the 17-year life of a patent against proposals to shorten it; Knudsen declared that revolutionary changes in automobile design are possible but not probable, and James McEvoy, patent counsel for General Motors, asked publication of applications for patents before patents are issued by the Patent Office.

Mrs. Mitchell Fails to Win Citizenship

Wife of Diplomat Can't Prove She's Been In U. S. Long Enough

Mrs. Jean Elder Mitchell, British wife of Reginald Mitchell, State Department official, failed to obtain her citizenship yesterday in District Court because of lack of sufficient proof that she had resided here the required length of time.

When one of Mrs. Mitchell's witnesses testified that he knew personally of her residence in the United States only since the fall of 1935 instead of June, 1935, Justice Letts refused to grant citizenship, but indicated he would hold a special hearing when a satisfactory witness could be produced. Mitchell said last night he expected the hearing would be held within two weeks.

Among the 27 successful applicants yesterday was Edward Patrick Scarborough, 71-year-old Irishman, who claimed he had become a citizen years ago, but was unable to produce the records. Others naturalized were:

The Warring Trial

Trial of the Warring brothers on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government of income taxes attracted widespread attention primarily because their business is the illegal numbers racket. In the public mind the real issue was whether this crime-breeding business could be broken up. But the case before the court was concerned only with enforcement of Federal tax laws.

It may be that this anomalous aspect of the case was chiefly responsible for the failure of the jury to reach a verdict. District Attorney Pine presented extensive evidence intended to show that the Warring brothers had spent more money than they had accounted for in their income-tax returns. But he failed to convince all the jurors that the defendants were guilty of fraudulent intentions. Or it may be that some jurors simply revolted against the indirect methods by which public officials are trying to strike at the numbers racket.

Before the next trial on the income-tax charge is held Mr. Pine may be able to find additional evidence. Regardless of what the outcome of that case may be, however, the community ought to face up to the disgraceful situation which the first trial exposed. There may be doubt as to whether the Warrings conspired to defraud the Government. But there is no doubt whatever that they have reaped huge profits from an illegal racket in the Nation's Capital.

Evidence presented at the trial shows that these men have been operating an illegal gambling business in the District since 1934. Books they submitted to treasury agents showed a gross take of $2,000,000 in a year and a half. In 1936 the Warrings reported a net income of $57,000 from their racket. Yet none of them has ever been brought before the courts on charges of violating the statute which outlaws the numbers game.

Added to this disheartening picture is the repeated assertion that the Warrings have paid thousands of dollars annually for protection from arrest. Even after it became evident that they could not deduct this item from their taxable income, the statement that the protection was paid to unnamed policemen was repeated. That charge will keep the Police Department under a serious cloud of suspicion until it is disproved or the corrupt officers ousted.

Of course, the evidence brought out in the income-tax case can not be used to prosecute the Warrings on numbers racket charges. It was given to the Treasury in confidence. But that does not prevent the police from developing cases of their own under the anti-gambling law. As matters stand, it will be presumed that this illegal business went merrily on even while its proprietors were before the court.

Citizens have reason to be indignant over this sorry spectacle of helplessness on the part of law-enforcement officials. The problem is baffling in many respects. But no law-abiding community can afford to conclude that it is unsolvable. The time has come for drastic action—first, to purge the Police Department of all suspicion of corruption and, second, to launch a direct attack upon the numbers racket that will not hinge upon the vagaries of underworld income.

Paul Y. Anderson

"I'm going to end it all," said Paul Y. Anderson, "my usefulness is at an end." And with that same impetuousness which had so often marked his long, frequently stormy and always brilliant career as Washington correspondent he carried out his threat to its fatal and pathetic conclusion.

In this instance Anderson was tragically wrong. His usefulness, far from being over, had in a sense only just begun. At 45, with a lifetime of superb reporting experience behind him, he could look forward to many more years of active service.

Anderson had the virtues of his defects. The world in which he lived and moved and had his being was a world of brilliant whites and unrelieved blacks, of angels and devils, of ultra-good and ultra-bad. What he believed, he believed with passionate intensity and with self-sacrificing devotion. What he despised, and above all he despised what he considered the cheap, the shoddy, the mediocre and the fraudulent, he hated with evangelical ferocity.

Anderson was not always just in his judgments. But just or unjust, his viewpoint reflected an implacable honesty of mind wedded to an unflinchingly courageous spirit. One of the great crusading reporters of our times, he gave luster to his profession and rendered service which was never underestimated by those who disagreed with him.

France Struggles Back

The Franco-German peace pact, signed in Paris yesterday, is from the viewpoint of the Daladier government part of a general program of rehabilitation. Its provisions, particularly that whereby Germany formally accepts her present western frontier as definitive and final, are obviously constructive. For many years it has been impossible to envisage a major European war without picturing France and Germany as leaders in the opposing camps. A peaceful agreement between these two powers is, as the text of the present accord emphasizes, "an essential element for the maintenance of general peace."

So far as it goes the Franco-German pact represents a lessening of that current international tension which must be relaxed if war is to be averted. But this new agreement will not fulfill its possibilities unless it does more than end all threat of war along the Rhine. It must be utilized to assist a real recovery for France, where domestic problems have of late months threatened disaster, regardless of whether or not international peace is preserved.

The signing of the Franco-German pact is to be followed promptly by the convocation of Parliament, not merely to examine the new accord but primarily to approve the decree laws against which last week's abortive general strike was directed. It is difficult to recall a session of the Chamber of Deputies more potentially important than that scheduled to assemble tomorrow. In its hands, to a large extent, rests the issue of whether or not France will remain a first-class power.

In a way which Americans can readily understand the French people have of late years been playing with a form of economic suicide. Under the pressure of an aggressive and powerful trade unionism, assisted in its program by blind reaction on the right, the Chamber of Deputies in 1936 put through social legislation which has materially injured the industrial vitality of the nation and thereby greatly contributed to its recent diplomatic weakness. The Munich agreement, it cannot be too strongly asserted, is to no small extent connected with Leon Blum's policy of ineffectual and actually debilitating social reform.

The Blum program failed because in conception it misunderstood the intimate and essential connection between social advance and national productivity. A floor could have been put under wages, and a ceiling over hours, to the extent that the Socialist premier approved, if there had been a simultaneous and adequate increase in the production of French factories. It was Blum's assumption that higher wages for a shorter working week would automatically lead to increased consumption, thereby increasing production and augmenting the national income. The trouble with this easy "purchasing power theory," also very popular in the United States, is that it puts the cart before the horse.

To obtain increased production there is necessary not merely a greater general purchasing power but also a constant modernization of plant, a greater mechanization of industry, which involves tremendous capital outlay. Socks will not be produced more cheaply because the individual worker can afford an extra pair. On the contrary, increased demand without improved productive methods will tend to increase rather than lower the price of all manufactured articles. Efficient production as well as effective demand is essential if prices are not to be raised by increased labor costs. And the tragedy of the Blum program has been that it made French production not more, but far less, efficient.

Modernization of plant requires heavy expenditures of capital. To obtain this capital at all, let alone at reasonable interest rates, there must be confidence on the part of the owners of capital. In a Socialist state it is theoretically possible for the government to furnish capital to state-owned and state-directed enterprises. Russia does that in a fumbling way. Germany and Italy are doing it more and more. But in France and the other democracies capital can only flow to industry if the individual capitalists are willing to invest their resources.

The French capitalists, from big bankers down to little farmers, have been unwilling to direct their capital to French industry, for the simple reason that the stability essential to encourage investment has recently been lacking. French capitalists, large and small, have preferred to hoard their savings, to buy real estate, especially to send their money abroad—to do anything rather than to invest it at home.

So the social reforms of the Blum government have broken down. They were shattered not by political opposition but because investment processes, dependent on national stability and popular confidence, failed to function. Without investment there could be no modernization of plant. Without this mechanization there could not be cheaper production. Without cheaper production the higher wages and shorter hours were worthless to their intended beneficiaries. More pay for French workers now buys them less merchandise. And shorter working hours have merely stimulated the huge increase in the cost of living since 1936.

In a democracy it is never easy for a government to stand up to realities which involve a seeming retreat in the field of social legislation. But the situation in France is now so desperate that Premier Daladier and his colleagues have had to confront the issue squarely. Facing the issue has also involved facing a general strike, deliberately encouraged by those Communists who see a chance to substitute chaos for capitalism in France. But on the strike test Daladier has scored a substantial victory. The great majority of the workers have demonstrated a real understanding of the complex national problem, and a patriotic willingness to make further sacrifices to pull their country through.

On top of his victory in the general strike Daladier has now reached a constructive inderstanding with Germany. This, too, is an important stabilizing element, for even without other adverse circumstances, the threat of war undermines confidence and distorts normal economic processes.

With these two gains, on the social and the diplomatic front, the French premier will tomorrow submit his program to parliamentary discussion. Certainly no deputy competent to see the picture as a whole can fail to realize that Daladier has so far handled a most difficult and thankless task with courage, with coolness and with skill.

McKinley's Precedent

Senator Guffey's appeal to President Roosevelt to seek a third term should not be taken seriously. There is no indication whatever that he spoke for the President, or that his attempt to throw Mr. Roosevelt's hat into the 1940 ring will be welcomed at the White House. Indeed, Mr. Guffey's solicitude is more likely to embarrass the Administration.

Even if Mr. Roosevelt were thinking seriously of a renomination by the 1940 Democratic National Convention, he certainly would not care to raise the issue now. Congress will soon be in session, confronted by a large volume of important legislation. A fight over the third-term issue might disrupt the 1939 session in much the same way that the fight over reorganization of the Supreme Court affected the Seventy-fifth Congress nearly two years ago.

The result of such a controversy would be to widen the breach in the ranks of Democratic legislators. And the upshot of a dispute over a third term might well be enactment by the Senate of a resolution condemning any such move. A similar resolution was passed in 1928 with enthusiastic support from the Democratic side.

What, then, is Mr. Guffey's purpose in trying to push President Roosevelt into a third-term race? His statement seems to be a direct outgrowth of his experience in the recent elections. In the primaries his candidates went down to defeat. So he made peace with the winning Democrats. In the November election they were voted out. A politician in that predicament would naturally grasp at any straw.

No one understands this situation more fully than President Roosevelt. In view of the adverse reaction to Mr. Guffey's suggestion, the President may find it desirable to protect himself against embarrassment by self-serving friends. If so, he will have an excellent precedent for such action in the statement of President McKinley on June 11, 1901.

Like President Roosevelt, Mr. McKinley was at the zenith of his popularity when his second term began on March 4, 1901. War with Spain had ended in victory for the United States. Prosperity had been regained. Friends began to talk of drafting him for a third term.

The forthright statement in which President McKinley removed his name from any speculation of this sort added strength to the two-term tradition. His words are still significant:

> There are now questions of the gravest importance before the Administration and the country, and their just consideration should not be prejudiced in the public mind by even the suspicion of the thought of a third term. In view, therefore, of the reiteration of the suggestion, I will say now, once for all, expressing a long-settled conviction, that I not only am not and will not be a candidate for a third term, but would not accept a nomination if it were tendered me. My only ambition is to serve through my second term to the acceptance of my countrymen, whose generous confidence I so deeply appreciate, and then with them to do my duty in the ranks of the private citizens.

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, of Zion City, Ill., who was interviewed in Atlanta recently, said he thinks President Roosevelt's policies are sound and that the earth is flat.

"The doctor felt his patient's purse."—From a magazine story. We don't know whether or not that's a typographical error, because we don't know the doctor.

The U. S. And U. S. S. R.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the recent correspondence on the suggested Russo-American alliance, permit me to indicate some of the factors that tend to link the peoples of these two great countries and make them a powerful force for peace in the world.

Historically there is the revolutionary tradition common to both, culminating first in the United States in 1776 and in the Soviet Union in 1917. Though there is a disparity in time, there is little essential difference in the spirit of revolt provoked by the imperialist designs of England and the autocracy of the Czar of All the Russias. Too few realize that the emancipation of the American Negro and the liberation of the Russian serf almost paralleled one another. Though these changes had their economic origins, they eventually resolved themselves into peoples' movements pure and simple.

There were leaders who helped vitalize and clarify the popular sentiment of their times; in America, Paine, Jefferson and Lincoln; in Russia, Lenin, Stalin and, yes, the Communist Party. The "sunshine patriots" will smirk at the mention of mass solidarity and democracy in the Soviet Union, but was the treatment accorded Benedict Arnold and the Tories by our Revolutionary predecessors any the less expedient than the exposure and elimination of sabotageurs and counter-revolutionaries in present-day Russia? The patterning of the new Soviet Constitution after that of the United States betrays the Russian respect for the American love of democratic guarantees.

Economically, there are even more striking comparisons to be made. Both are countries of vast expanses and huge natural resources, self-reliant agricultural resources and a high degree of industrialization. The realization of their natural and technical potentialities demands the pursuit of a policy of world peace and in concert with the remaining democracies can curb the "have-not" war-makers, not with war but with economic sanctions. Not to do so is to invite destruction. Here again is it possible to review the marvels of Soviet industrialization and agriculture and then to conceive of their achievement by a "suppressed" people?

Lastly there are the cultural similarities between the two nations. Both are the strongholds of popular education. Russian enrollment in schools of higher learning exceeds the combined total in those of Japan, Italy and Germany. Nowhere abroad are American writers translated and as avidly read as in the Soviet Union. There, too, the creative arts have grown and spread at a pace scarcely known in the history of civilization.

These last 20 years have been the "Valley Forge" of Russian freedom. For Americans to know these things and to consider the Soviet Union anything but a "friendly neighbor" would be of tragic consequences to all but the agents of fascism whose high purpose it is to cause such misunderstanding and alienation.

Barbs For The New Deal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a 1932 New Deal voter, but of the "non-repeat" order of dupe, I am glad to see that Senator Guffey, Democratic State boss, has seconded Mr. Ickes, Chicago's mayor intendant, in advocating a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. Not in a long time has so much cheer been given to the opposition.

In a real test Mr. Roosevelt's supposed "personal popularity" is likely to be found much exaggerated, and I believe future Gallup polls will reflect this. That big segment of former adherents on the fence are still nominally for him. How they'd vote after a session of heavy thought and unbiased New Deal examination is another question.

Formerly the Deal could safely depend upon the whole handout brigade proclaiming their hero; swallowing without question the vast crude propaganda put out to influence them; choking with anger at the pictures of that great ogre, Big Business, treading the masses, as booed over the radio by righteous New Deal spellbinders.

But recently I've noticed a break. Among those not debauched to acceptance of relief as a career, the idea is finally seeping that the Deal it a flop and a fallacy. In the recent election (which Dealers are still trying manfully to laugh off) this tendency was evidenced in that the Communist and relief vote in New York was all that staved off a complete rout.

WPA Sweepstakes?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the WPA has become a fixed expense to our country and since we, the taxpayers, are the ones who must pay, I suggest that the forthcoming Congress legalize a lottery, all prizes free of income tax, run it once every four months, call it the WPA Sweepstakes, and thus provide at least $1,000,000,000 per year which will not come from tax money.

Of course, the same voters who brought about that ghastly horror called the prohibition era will be against it and, of course, the lawmakers will be scared to death of the church vote, but it is nonetheless an excellent idea and it is offered gratis.

Ireland, and I don't think we are a mite better than she, has done wonders for her hospitals with a like idea, and I think it is about time we dropped some of our hypocrisy and got down to cases. I, for one, believe that the idea would be extremely popular. How about it, with tickets on sale at every postoffice window and hope renewed in the hearts of us all?

Freedom Of The Press

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During our Thanksgiving period it occurred to me very keenly that if there was one blessing that outweighed all others, in reference to our Nation, it is indeed the free press and the fine newswriters and commentators, but especially for me, those of The Post—your editorial sheet and those who give us the sane, truthful items from day to day.

This letter is an outward or verbal expression of an inner gratitude, for this very thing we call the free press. What, I want to know, would the average citizen do for facts concerning the operation of our Government? The opinion of the reliable paper, the viewpoint of the responsible commentator, each as he gets his line on an especial action, is absolutely necessary to the man or woman who is interested in the welfare of these United States. It seems as necessary for one these days to see the editorial page of the morning paper as to ask the guidance of Providence through the confusion which has been thrust upon us. Kindly accept this in the same spirit in which it is written.

Capt. McIntire's Appointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having been for many years an admiring reader of your paper, I am appalled to read this morning your editorial entitled "A Blow To Morale."

That editorial is so incorrect and incomplete as to facts that the question is raised as to whether your informant on this occasion has an ax to grind and has deliberately, willfully and maliciously given you false information, when correct information can easily be had by consulting the record of a certain Senate committee hearing, the revised statutes and the record of the present and past nominations by the Navy Department to the President of officers to big jobs.

Is it no secret that the selection of Capt. McIntire has aroused resentment? Resentment by whom? Those who would put over a much less qualified officer. This resentment, if any, may be voiced, but not because of the reasons you state.

This was not a "sky-rocketing elevation" at all; look at the nominations submitted in the past by the Navy Department. This nomination is not "in total" or other disregard of the regular system of promotion; it is in accordance with the law of Congress—both technically and in intent. The President may not have consulted the Secretary of the Navy about Capt. McIntire's appointment. It would seem more proper for the Secretary to consult him! Why not in this case?

The recently appointed Surgeon General will temporarily rank higher than many of his seniors in rank (not of higher efficiency); but how many did the Navy Department attempt to pass over, and for what reason?

No officer over whom Capt. McIntire is temporarily advanced will have his chance of promotion "impaired or delayed"—unless you think Capt. McIntire would later have failed of selection—an idea that could not be entertained by any normal and informed person.

The alleged "unsavory precedent" you mention has no possible application to the appointment of Capt. McIntire. No "established system of promotion" has been interfered with. No "erratic divergence" from the rules has occurred. No bad feeling will arise in the Navy.

A highly qualified aspirant for the job in question, at present instance, said recently to me: "I want that job—it's my last chance; but if McIntire is selected, it's all right with me, for he is the best man in the Medical Corps for the job."

Coughlin's Broadcasts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the Steck letter in your Sunday issue, the writer wishes to advise that he listened to the November 20 broadcast of Father Coughlin and found it distinctly anti-Semitic in intent.

Why, otherwise, would he make the offer to send to his listeners, lists of the Jewish Communists concerned in the Russian revolution of 1917, and in the German and Hungarian uprisings of 1919, completely isolated from the context of his address.

The case against our radio friend can be clinched by the fact that the magazine Time in its November 14 issue, under Religion, reports that Coughlin has been serializing in his publication, Social Justice, the viciously anti-Semitic "Protocols of the Elders of Zion."

Dr. Coughlin's condoning of fascism as "a defense mechanism" shows too clearly the trend of his thought.

The TVA Inquiry

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reason why 90 per cent of business is distrustful of the New Deal is amply illustrated by the conduct of the Congressional investigation of the TVA. Presumably this was to be an impartial inquiry with a view to getting at the facts, but it has turned out to be merely another forum for criticism of private enterprise. If I had not read otherwise, no one could convince me that Mr. Biddle, counsel for the committee, was not counsel for the TVA.

Bad Neighbor Policy

I WAS ONCE a college football enthusiast. It was when I was dewey-eyed and the world was young, and there were only the Big Three, and perhaps Cornell and Dartmouth, in the world, with the Army and the Navy in the further distances representing the only Greater Glory. All the rest were well outside my ken. I hardly knew there was a Middle West, and their hazy names merely figured as the Opposition—they were foils to show the greatness of Harvard or Yale or Princeton. The phrase Big Ten was yet unknown. For me it was a gala day when Harvard played the Army or the Navy or Dartmouth; or when Princeton came to fight the Crimson on the home ground. Oh, Boston was thick with glory then! The boys and girls wore raccoon coats and carried pennants and had crazy automobiles with pictures on them.

I didn't go to the games. The boys I knew couldn't take me—they were working their way through college and had all they could do to pay my way to the movies. Besides, one of the bright-eyed lads went in for chess and the other was an entomology major of some sort and spent his leisure in the woods with a butterfly net.

But I was an enthusiast just the same and could be seen to mingle in the rarefied air of Boston or Cambridge on any Saturday afternoon in the autumn. I was proud as punch when Harvard won. My older sister's beau was a Harvard man and sometimes took her to the games. They would come home eyes shining, carrying pennants with the white H rampant gardant on the field of crimson, and with crackerjacks in their hair.

When Harvard wasn't one of the combatants I favored Princeton or Dartmouth or the Army, never Yale because Old Eli of course was the Crimson's deadliest foe. To see a Harvard-Yale game was the paramount idea in entertainment; tea dancing and the theater afterward, the threshold of Paradise. The only thing that could possibly top it was the yet more dazzling prospect of seeing the Army and the Navy fight it out in Gotham on Thanksgiving Day; and then, if added to that, theaters, football teas and New York's night clubs . . . ah, that maiden dream! . . .

Once that maiden dream came so near to being realized that if we could retain some of the intensity of our youthful disappointments, I should have found it in my heart to be bitter. It was a Thanksgiving week-end, and my friend, Elaine, and I were en route to New York by boat to spend the holiday there. Elaine was a popular girl and had engagements to fulfill. I was merely visiting an aunt. But the all-night boat trip was a pleasure in itself, I and our youthful insouciance on a shipful of hard-drinking collegians on the way to a big game mixed admirably on that gala occasion.

The first thing we knew Elaine and I had a couple of young Technology men in tow. My man was one of our Latin-American cousins, and all I knew about him was that I had seen him on the tennis courts, that some of his names were Carlos and Don Jose, or so he said, and that the boys called him Joe. But he was smooth. He told me I was prettier than the glamorous Elaine (little then I wotted that Latins are Lousy Lovers), and, be still my heart! he asked me to go to the Army-Navy game the next day.

I was flustered. I gasped "You don't have a date?" "Sometheeng has gone wrong with thee arrangements. I have lose my lady fren'! You are anyway much nicer. It is much better that I take you." He kissed the palm of the hand he was holding. It was my hand. Oh, if someone had told me about Latins! I might have been saved from an aversion-to-football-phobia that got tangled up with my plastic years.

I stammered and accepted. We strolled the deck; saw Elaine lose her escort to Bacchus and to Morpheus. Obligingly Carlos walked with me and Elaine to our stateroom. She went in, and I stood with him in the dark passageway trying to say goodnight. What, retire? Would I not spend the night with him on the upper deck, under the stars, where the wind would blow through our hair? There was a moon riding the Heavens (and several clinching couples on the deck).

I demurred. We were at the stateroom door. Elaine was a scaredy-cat and was calling my name from within the room. Interspersed with his amorous Latin murmers while he dallied with my fingers were shouts from Elaine: "When are you coming to bed? I'm scared." "Goodnight, Carlos, I must go in. I'll see you in the morning." "Oh, but for a leedle while, I will not hurt you." "No, Elaine is scared. I really must go; goodnight, Carlos, till tomorrow."

Excitement in the morning. We had our bags, the ship was docking. "I must see Carlos," I said to Elaine. "I'm going to the game with him. We haven't arranged a meeting place. Oh, there he is, with his friends. I'll call him." I started toward him. The stony stare of a changed Carlos looked through me. I started toward him, I said, but froze to the spot. He was coming my way, and he not only looked, but he walked right through me.

"Why, Elaine, he's sore! What do you suppose is the matter?" I asked. Elaine turned a faintly ironical eye on me. She might have been saying: "Well, you are pretty dumb, aren't you?"

Latins! They get mad about such things. Well, nobody had ever told me . . . And I have yet to see my first Army and Navy game.

Society And Debuts

I DON'T KNOW how it is out around the rest of the country, but here in New York some people with dough have developed the most curious notion of social life for a young girl. Some of our very best families "chauffeur families" they are called by way of social and economic classification—think that a kid of 15-16 or so is missing life and opportunities to marry unless she is encouraged to hang around saloons at night dressed up like a prosperous alimony job and feel that she is struggling on the grade if she gets home much before the old man gets up to go to work. They are called debutantes, which means that the family has hired a big hall in some hotel and tossed an enormous drunken party for a kid by way of announcing that she is now on the market for her first husband. The original intent for the debut was to present a little housekept chickadee for the inspection and appraisal of society and place her in circulation. But there is no society any more, and, anyway, these young ones usually have jumped the gun by a year or two and know or are known by most of the most prominent saloonkeepers, bartenders and bar flies long before the old gent and the old lady formally slip the leash.

PEGLER

A LADY JOURNALIST on the society run tells me that, in the lack of real society now in the old sense of the word, it has become necessary to import young dress-suit stags from colleges to drink the wine and scuffle with the young ladies in the dance numbers, with the old man paying their expenses to and from. She says there is a regular debut agency which supplies such stags in any desired number.

But the net result of the debut is nothing more than an epidemic hangover and a deep wound in the old man's roll, because our social belle already knows most of the guests and doesn't remember the names of the professional stags and has no motive to see them again, considering that they are only gigolos, after all. An old doll with a lot of money and a neck all twisty and scrawny like a bridge cable can take an interest in a "jig," but a deb still has her artistic or professional pride.

THE TRUE OBJECT of the debut binge and the night-prowling of the pretty little thrips—and, no two ways about it, some of them would knock your eye out—seems to be to obtain publicity. Publicity in the daily papers is good, publicity in the Sundays is a little bit special, but publicity in the society slicks, those magazines of no circulation which advertise jewelry and expensive saddles and country estates that nobody ever wants to buy—that kind of publicity in this country is equivalent to mention in the British court circular.

The publicity is no good to the debutantes or their old gents and old ladies, but they think it makes them very social and imagine that everybody is mentioning their names enviously, and that makes them feel good. But actually publicity is good only in case a man has something to promote, to sell, and should be addressed to the market. This publicity about little, immature kids is about 99 per cent wasted because it goes out to an audience composed of all classes, including a few potential buyers or clients. It sums up as mere notoriety.

IT MIGHT BE interesting to wonder why the papers make so much publicity for such a very few individuals, but I just can't guess as to that, because in the beginning practically all of these kids are total nobodies and the daughters of nobodies, and it would be just as sensible to cover every bar and grill, every dance hall in New York and nearby New Jersey and run paragraphs and pictures about young girls out for a little fun who work in offices and factories. Do you suppose we can be snobs in this business and believers in our own glamorization of the saloon life of the very few?

But to get back to the original idea, most of us have always felt sorry for the little daughters of the poor who, having no better raising or no home circle to which they may invite their gentlemen friends, are forced to frequent saloons for the social side of their life. The sociology blokes always told us that was too bad, and yet, for our confusion, we now find some of our very best families, judged on the basis of their street addresses, sending their fairest and tenderest buds out dramming in the jooks until all hours.

Masaryk Coming To Meeting of American Jewry

Jan Masaryk, son of the founder of the Czecho-Slovakian republic, who resigned Monday as minister of Czecho-Slovakia in London, will come to the United States early next month to speak at the national conference for Palestine, January 14-15 at the Mayflower Hotel.

More than 1,500 Jewish leaders from all parts of the Nation will attend the conference. Headquarters of the United Palestine Appeal yesterday revealed it had received a message from Dr. Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard Law School, which said:

"Hitherto the rebuilding of Palestine has been a noble dream. Now it is a dire necessity. The pioneers have done their glorious part to make the dream a living reality. Let us do our part."

Political Parson—1938 Model

The circumstances attending Father Coughlin's publication of the false and discredited "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion," in that Hearstian adventure in journalism curiously named "Social Justice," won him the dubious honor of being classified by American opinion as a leading anti-Semite.

But it was his tendentious radio talk of November 20 that gained him the same accolade from the inspired German Nazi press, that court of last appeal in such matters. It isn't very strange that these sworn enemies of "political Catholicism" at this time brought him as a hero to the attention of a bewildered and sorely tried German people. When, however, what an age less rude than ours would have euphemistically called Father Coughlin's "half-truths" and "simplifications" of Russian and German history are no longer useful to justify the persecution of the Jews, the Nazis will find that the example of Father Coughlin is invaluable to hold up as a villain to justify persecution of the German Catholic clergy.

They can point him out, with the customary accent of Aryan virtue, in their references to "black priestcraft of the Vatican," Father Coughlin, the Nazis know, may easily be presented as a priest seeking with no little energy secular power of his own in political life.

Foreign Policy Unit Now 20 Years Old

Association, Praised by Hull and Halifax, Will Celebrate Anniversary Saturday In New York; It Publishes Books, Pamphlets, Sponsors Forums

By Sonia Tomara

The Foreign Policy Association will celebrate this week its twentieth anniversary. In the twenty years of its existence, it has gained among all Americans interested in foreign affairs a wide reputation as a center of research and guidance on all international questions.

When it was formed twenty years ago, soon after the Armistice, by a small group of men and women interested in America's foreign policy and in the conclusion of a fair peace it generally was admitted that the American public as a whole knew little and did not want to know much about the situation abroad. Today all foreigners who travel through the United States are surprised to see how wide the interest is in international questions. It now is a well-known fact that during the recent European crisis Americans had a clearer and more comprehensive picture of the European situation than the people of any town in Europe.

Newspapers, the radio and the Foreign Policy Association are responsible for having made Americans "foreign minded." The Foreign Policy Association alone has done in twenty years a remarkable work of spreading throughout the United States and even through foreign countries impartial, correct and well founded information on foreign affairs. It has done so by publishing regular bulletins, fortnightly reports, pamphlets and headline books and disseminating them among newspapers, universities, schools, diplomatic chancelleries and all persons anxious to know what was happening in the world. It also has untiringly organized lectures, public luncheons, forum discussions and radio broadcasts, always objectively informing the public and helping it to understand current international events.

More Than 17,000 Members

When the association was founded in November, 1918, under the name League of Free Nations Association, it had 141 members. This year its membership has exceeded 17,000, and there has been a rapid gain in the last month. More than half of the members are residents of towns scattered throughout the Eastern and Mid-Western States. In twenty years the association has held in New York and other cities 1,346 meetings, attended by half a million people.

Many outstanding statesmen of Europe have spoken at meetings of the organization. Among them have been Ramsay MacDonald, Pierre Laval, Dino Grandi, Paul Van Zeeland and Georges Bonnet. The research department of the association has published 353 foreign policy reports. In the last three years a total of 377,650 copies of such reports have been distributed.

The yearly budget of the F. P. A., which was figured at $24,000 in 1921, has now risen to $177,000. Its staff at the national headquarters in New York City and at the Washington bureau now consists of fifty persons.

Hull and Halifax Praise Work

Its work has been accorded recognition in two letters which its president, Raymond Leslie Buell, has received for its twentieth birthday from Cordell Hull, Secretary of States, and Lord Halifax, the British Foreign Secretary.

"In any democracy it is essential that the people understand the problems inherent in our relations and intercourse with other countries, because it is the people who determine foreign policy," wrote Mr. Hull. "At no time has there been a more imperative need for a well-informed public opinion than there is today. In its constant endeavors to meet such a need, the Foreign Policy Association . . . performs a real public service in making readily available essential information of a nonpartisan and objective character. During the twenty years of its existence, the association has made an important contribution toward an enlightened public understanding of our foreign relations and this record is one of which it can well be proud."

"The task it (the F. P. A.) has set itself of bringing to the knowledge of the public," says Lord Halifax, "from a source that can be suspected of no class, party or other bias, the best and most accurate possible knowledge of international affairs, has never been of greater importance than it is today. The wide and impartial dissemination of such knowledge is essential for every man and woman in our democratic countries, for without it the public cannot hope to reach wise decisions on the highly complex and momentous issues which are submitted to its judgment."

Genesis of Association

Little did the founders of the association realize twenty years ago the expansion their idea would undergo. They were a group of nineteen publishers, writers and professors who decided in April, 1918, when the war was still in full swing, that it would be useful to get together and discuss America's foreign policy of that time and of the future. They called themselves "The Committee on Nothing at All." The initiator of the idea was Paul U. Kellogg, editor of the Survey, who, on return from a trip to Europe, had been surprised to see that there was in America no organization to back Woodrow Wilson's principles, which, he said, "had become the hope of the world." The first members of the committee were all liberals and their main purpose was to prevent imperialism and nationalism from sweeping America and the world.

The idea proved viable. Meetings were held regularly through the summer of 1918 and the interest increased from the beginning. Professor Charles A. Beard was chairman of the program committee. With a foresight worthy of the historian he insisted on mentioning in the program the necessity of preventing "the extension of future racial antagonism." The first chairman of the association was Norman Hapgood, who was later replaced by James G. McDonald, and the first secretary was Miss Christine Merriman.

The organization took shape on November 27, 1918, two weeks after the Armistice, as the League of Free Nations Association. Its object was announced to be "the study of all sides of every important international question affecting the United States and the communication of the results of such study to as large a number of American people as possible." It advocated a democratic league of nations, an international parliament, a bill of rights for nations giving all peoples access to raw materials and to the seas.

Became a Non-Partisan Body

The first year of the association were stormy. It tried to guide America's foreign policy, it sent recommendations to the Versailles peacemakers, it advocated America's participation in the League of Nations. Sometimes its members failed to agree on the line of policy they wanted to follow. In 1921 the name of Foreign Policy Association was adopted and in 1922 a fundamental change in the organization took place. To avoid further conflicts among members, the board of directors decided to cease attempts to influence foreign policy. The association was made a non-partisan body for research and education.

The constitution of the new association was adopted in 1923 and amended in 1928. Its object was stated to "carry on reserach and educational activities to aid in the understanding and constructive development of American foreign policy."

The F. P. A. has not deviated from this object since its reorganization. Its objectivity and the care accorded by its research staff to the collection and checking of information have been of the greatest value to students of international affairs. Whatever the personal views of directors and research workers they never have influenced their statements or blurred the clearness of their vision. The Foreign Policy Association can truly be said to have accomplished in the last fifteen years a work of importance to historians.

Leaders in Organization

Among the men responsible for the growth and success of the F. P. A. are James G. McDonald, its chairman from 1919 to 1933; Raymond L. Buell, its president; Professor Edward Meade Earle, Joseph P. Chamberlain, William T. Stone, Washington correspondent and vice president, and several others. Mr. McDonald likes, however, to stress the important role women have played in the creation of the F. P. A. Without them, he says, men would not have pulled it through its hard times.

Women were active, indeed, from the outset in the association. Its first secretary was Miss Christine Merriman, who was later succeeded by Miss Esther G. Ogden. The post is now occupied by Miss Dorothy Leet, former director of Reid Hall in Paris. Mrs. Vera Micheles Dean is director of the research department; Miss Frances J. Pratt, director of the speakers' bureau; Mrs. Henry G. Leach, vice chairman. There are four women on the board of directors.

The anniversary of the associatin will be marked on Saturday, December 11, by a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, after which John G. Winant, director of the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, will speak on "Social Change;" Mr. Buel on "The Future of Democracy," and Mr. McDonald will survey the progress of the association since its foundation.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

More Peace

IN THE YEAR of our disgrace, 1919, there was signed in the great hall of Versailles, in Paris, a "peace treaty." It was signed in an atmosphere of hatred, cupidity and revenge. It was a betrayal of the principles and ideals for which millions of the best and bravest youth of the world had spilled their blood and given up their lives. The only justification that could be advanced for it was that it followed four terrible years of war and incorporated in itself the results of four years of battle, blood and hate.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

But this must also be said. Hardly was the ink dry upon it when the clear-eyed, the just and the decent in all countries denounced it.

John Maynard Keynes denounced its economic provisions in a book that swept the world. Liberal journalists in America, who had supported Wilson, branded it as a betrayal of his 14 points. There sprang up spontaneously friends of defeated Germany. The United States of America never signed it. And the League, created along with the treaty, contained provisions for its amendment. Slowly, but certainly, it began to be amended.

BEFORE THE NAZI revolution in Germany had ever broken out, the Treaty of Versailles was a dead document. It was dead, not only because Germany had grown stronger; it was dead by the vote of the world's conscience, and the world's common sense.

It was not worse than many other treaties. It was not worse, for instance—no, it was not so bad—as the treaty that a victorious Germany had imposed upon Russia in the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

The world said: "Well, it was the war." The world said: "Well, it was only a continuation of the war." The peoples of the world wanted peace. They still want it.

But we learned at Versailles that "peace" is more than a word. Peace is a positive condition of affairs. It is the recognition of mutuality of interest, as between peoples. It presumes the common acceptance of certain rules of behavior. It implies the end of terror and fear in common respect for certain common principles. It is, for instance, such a state of affairs as has existed between this country and Canada for over 100 years.

A one-way peace, dictated and enforced, can last only until the dictated-to becomes strong enough to overthrow it. If the dictator is strong enough, such a state of enforced warlessness may last for many decades. But it is not peace. It is inevitably the preface to war.

WHAT WAS SIGNED at Munich was not a peace, but a desperate capitulation. What was signed at Paris yesterday was not a peace, but a desperate armistice.

Nobody will doubt that pacific relations between France and Germany are a sine qua non for the peace of Europe. Nobody will doubt that an effort "to assure developments in this sense" ought to be the goal of a common effort. Everyone would greet a definitive settlement forever of all border disputes between the two nations. Everyone would welcome consultation in the event of differences between them.

Why, then, does no one really believe that this document means peace in any positive sense whatsoever? Why, then, are the French workers urged to lengthen their working day in order to arm? Why, then is Great Britain asking new concessions from everybody for defense? Why, then, is the United States contemplating a huge armament budget? Against what and against whom does the world arm?

WHY IS THE German foreign minister smuggled, as it were, into Paris, introduced into the capital like a burglar, the streets blocked to keep back the rage, furor and humiliation of the Paris population. Why, then, does this rage come from the very ranks of those Frenchmen who most consistently, for 20 years, worked for an understanding with Germany?

Why, then, do the French, and German, and British governments bring every possible pressure, direct and indirect, not only upon their own journalists, but upon the journalists of neutral powers, to be very quiet, not to criticize, not to ask questions, not to doubt?

Why, then, is this a peace without joy, a peace without confidence?

When the armistice was announced in November, 1918, people rushed into the streets, they embraced each other; strangers meeting in the street shook hands; for a few hours all men were happy. Nobody had to organize that demonstration. No one had to tell the press of the world to celebrate that peace.

The celebration of this peace is an automatic chorus of words framed in foreign offices.

WITH WHOM is this new peace signed? with "France?" With whom was the peace of Munich signed? With great Britain?

Not at all. With the prime minister, Mr. Chamberlain. In the next moment the German leader informs the world that if the prime minister of Great Britain should be Mr. Churchill, or Mr. Eden, or Mr. Duff-Cooper, the peace might be endangered.

Presumably we shall soon hear that if the prime minister of France should be, let us say, M. Mandel, the peace would be off. According to the newspaper Populaire, M. Mandel and M. Jean Zay, two members of the cabinet, are not invited to the official lunch. They happen to be Jewish, and, under this new peace, the German government, apparently, dictates the dining lists of its hosts.

Herr Ashmann is attached to the German delegation. Herr Ashmann is the press representative. Herr Ashmann is, in reality, the chief of the German disarmament commission. For the Hitler government wants to disarm France. It wants, above all, to disarm the world. For the world is its most dangerous enemy.

We may expect that a result of this peace will be again an attempt to get the French government to put into effect the decrees that M. Bonnet tried to write into the economic program of M. Paul Reynaud. Those decrees provided for secret trials in cases that might "have international repercussions." They provided that it "would become an offense to criticize the head of a friendly state." They amount, in fact, to giving the German government a veto power—through the French government—over the French press.

Give the German government that power, and France can build two airplanes to Germany's one and still be totally disarmed.

It amounts to a guaranty that the world will not be used to criticize any policy of the German government whatsoever, for Germany and its Fuehrer are one.

THERE IS NO reciprocity in this. The German government will gladly give its consent not to allow its press to criticize the head of any friendly state—provided, of course, that that head is friendly to the present German government.

The German government will give no consent to refrain from criticizing the form of government of a friendly state, or to refrain from sending its agents to sow dissension in the midst of a friendly state, or to use its nationals to make propaganda against the forms, customs and social organization of a friendly state, or to attempt to buy, bribe or intimidate the press of a friendly state, or to spend millions disseminating anti-Semitic and anti-labor propaganda in a friendly state, or to blackmail money out of the citizens of a friendly state, by, like kidnapers, holding innocent victims of its terror as hostages, in the hope of ransom money from abroad!

It will not consent to abandon a policy which throws millions of penniless refugees loose upon other friendly states, exploiting thus, in the most cynical way, the humane instincts of the rest of mankind.

THE PRESENT French-German borders will be "definitive." But if a movement for "independence" should "spontaneously" arise in Alsace-Lorraine, the German government, of course, would recognize a new situation.

An independent Alsace-Lorraine was prophesied to me just before the plebiscite in the Saar, by the German industrialist, Hermann Roechling.

And we must always remember that this German government believes in "dynamism." It is really Trotskyist, in that it accepts the idea of the permanent revolution, with "peace" as a means to that end.

Books And Things

Town Dogs

ABOUT DOGS in the city . . . They belong; they may even prefer it. Dr. James M. Kinney, chief veterinarian of the Ellin Prince Speyer Hospital, says so; and Ann Honeycutt helps him say it in a style befitting James Thurber's doggy illustrations. The title of the book is "How to Raise a Dog, in the City and in the Suburbs" (Simon & Schuster, $2); and you've never read a dog book like it. Both text and pictures have a swing rhythm.

We've all toiled through books about dogs. Drivel about "points"; pages and pages of worrying about the innumerable ailments to which dogs are liable; pictures which may have been taken from life but look as if they had been made in an old-fashioned taxidermist's studio. Or sentimental croonings about man's best friend. "How to Raise a Dog" isn't that kind; it begins with the assumption that you can't help having a dog. If you don't succumb yourself, your child will welcome you some night with "a scraggly puppy from the Lord knows where," as Dr. Kinney—or is it Miss Honeycutt?—says. The book continues on the general assumption that having a dog needn't be an unmitigated hardship. Incidentally, it admits that there is a lot which even the chief veterinarian of the Ellin Prince Speyer Hospital doesn't know about dogs.

As to breeds, Dr. Kinney—and Miss Honeycutt—suggest that you just pick out the kind of dog you like. Even a St. Bernard can't be guaranteed gentle; and if you are worried about German shepherd dogs (what kind of propaganda is it which has turned "police" into "shepherd" dogs?), remember that this Teutonic breed is preferred by those who train dogs to guide the blind for the Seeing Eye organization.

If you like big dogs, it's all right with Dr. Kinney—and Miss Honeycutt. They do point out that big dogs eat from 3 to 5 pounds of meat a day, which might be an item in your family budget; that they can upset a table with a mild wag of the tail, or go through an apartment "like a chain gang of goats"; and that they have different ideas of exercise from Pekingese. There are already dog-walking services which hire out dog walkers by the hour, day or week, Dr. Kinney says; he suggests that someone open a dog gymnasium for the strenuous larger breeds.

MONGRELS ARE ALL RIGHT to Dr. Kinney, though he has a prejudice against letting mongrels breed. But he doubts the convenient theory that mongrels are better tempered than pure-bred dogs. The chief advantage of that theory is its cheapness; it has saved some of us a lot of money. The nicest dog I ever knew was a cross between a poodle and a Pekingese, costing $5 at six weeks. He was charming; Michael named him Fido Danger Gannett, "danger" being at that stage the only word which Michael could read. One of the pleasantest things about this book is that its authors doubt almost everything. They offer a full line of recipes for dog diets, arranged for various ages and various breeds, but they add that anything may work. Dr. Kinney says that the Italians of the East Side raise fine puppies on spaghetti, and he has known dogs to grow up healthy on an apparently lethal diet of fried pancakes and nothing else.

What matters most is love. That sounds sentimental, but Dr. Kinney and Miss Honeycutt aren't a bit—well, hardly at all—sentimental. They do admit that dogs are the most civilized, the most co-operative, the most dependable and the most charming of all animals, and not so dumb, either, and that the chief faults found in adult dogs are likely to be due to the dog owners. "Dog owners," they say, "need far more training than dogs"; they offer some practical hints on the care and training of dog owners. Chiefly they must be taught to avoid inconsistency, leniency and impatience.

What a dog wants, in which he is very like the human child, is affection and praise.

IT'S DR. KINNEY'S guess that the cave man never worked hard to train wild dogs. A dog probably met the cave man out under a tree, smiled at him, licked his hand, rolled over two or three times, chased a stick and laid it at the cave man's feet, stood up on his hind legs, pawed and admired the Paleolithic man and looked up at him with dark, tragic eyes. The cave man, Dr. Kinney believes, was a pushover; the dog moved into the cave that same night with a new title—Hunting Companion. He liked it, and he stayed.

A few comforting notes picked up in the course of this refreshing book: Dogs perspire through the pads of their feet and through their tongues, so don't need as many baths as the human animal; once a month is a "fastidiously generous" schedule for dog baths; constant bathing is actually bad for their coats. Puppies under six months should not be bathed at all . . . Rabies is not as serious a plague as it sounds; during the ten-year period of 1928-37 94 persons were reported bitten by mad dogs in the Borough of Manhattan; 90 received complete treatment; none acquired hydrophobia . . . The love-life problem of the dog is far less serious than that of the cat. Many dogs live full and happy and completely celibate lives.

Maybe it isn't quite so simple as it sounds. Anyway, "How to Raise a Dog" is an easy book to read—with its combination of Kinney common sense, Thurber nonsense and Ann Honeycutt's gift for merging the two qualities in the same sentences.

Risk Of Balancing The Budget

APART FROM national defense, the most important job before the Roosevelt Administration and the coming Congress is the promotion of a sound economic recovery. In a real sense sound economic recovery is national defense also. It is the foremost line of internal defense against social upheaval.

LINDLEY

Both national defense in its usual meaning, defense against armed invasion, and internal defense are indispensable. Our democracy can be lost on either front. Neither is impregnable. At a cost which we can well afford we can make the United States, North and Central America, and probably the whole hemisphere, secure against invasion. The military and naval experts know, for the most part, what needs to be done.

We have the resources to make the home front secure by providing a decent living for every citizen. When it comes to ways and means, there is no agreement, or approximation to it. But presumably almost every citizen would like to see the goal—a decent living for every citizen—achieved within the framework of our democratic institutions. And presumably most people realize that another severe setback, like the long one of 1930-33, or even the short one that began in October, 1937, would be extremely hazardous.

IN ECONOMICS nothing can be proved. But the experience of the last five years has indicated very strongly that the Federal Government can promote recovery by borrowing money and spending it. During the first recovery, which began in 1933 and ended in the fall of 1937, the spending program was only one element in a rather complex set of measures, some of which aided recovery and others of which probably retarded it. But the second recovery, which began in the summer of 1938, has come with Government spending, unconfused by other measures. And, although there probably were other causes for the second depression, it was preceded by a very rapid reduction in the Federal Government's net expenditures—the difference between what the Federal Government spent and what it took back through taxes.

As the first recovery got well under way, private capital began to help it along by investing in new equipment, and, to some extent, in new plants. Also it began to trickle into housing. But when the downturn came more than a year ago, private capital became cautious again. It remained utterly unmoved by the pledges of Secretary Morgenthau that the budget would be balanced and by the "stand-still" policy which the Roosevelt Administration pursued during the fall, winter and early spring months. Now that Government spending has brought another upturn, private capital is showing signs of moving again.

ALL THIS EXPERIENCE has instilled caution into the budget-balancers in the Administration—of whom there are more than the critics of the New Deal sometimes realize. The invigorating economic effects of Federal borrowing and spending have been pretty well shown. On the other hand, the theory that a prompt balancing of the budget will produce recovery is only a theory. Reports are reaching Washington through various channels that a great many businessmen have changed their minds—that they would rather rely on experience than on a theory which is at odds with it.

After all, there are three ways, at least in theory, to balance the Federal budget. One is by cutting expenditures. This way is purely theoretical. If the result of cutting expenditures is an economic downturn, and therefore less revenue is derived from taxes, the budget won't balance.

The second way is by increasing taxes. If it were possible to find and to levy enough nondeflationary taxes, the budget could be balanced in this way. But at the present level of national income it is almost impossible to tax enough to balance the budget without seriously impairing buying power or so heavily burdening business that the result will be deflationary.

THE THIRD WAY to balance the budget is by promoting economic recovery until the present tax system brings in enough revenue to balance the budget.

The three ways can be combined. But experience suggests that there is less risk in relying on the third way.

In the Administration, and outside it, are economists who gradually have been moving toward the conclusion that if we are to have full economic recovery, the Federal budget will have to remain out of balance indefinitely. They believe that the Federal Government will have to take over in part the obligation of creating debt—or investing funds—formerly performed by private capital. As yet there is no practical reason for deciding whether or not that theory is correct.

It is enough now to avoid the risk of cutting Federal expenditures substantially before the national income has risen high enough to make it safe to experiment with a balanced budget.

Children's Hospital Officials Heard By A. M. A. Jury

The president and superintendent of Children's Hospital were among the witnesses heard yesterday by the extraordinary grand jury investigating alleged monopolistic practices of the American Medical Association.

Charles D. Drayton, president of the hospital, refused to comment on his testimony, but told The Post last night that "we try to occupy a neutral position." He pointed out that Children's Hospital is a charitable institution and therefore "we have to court the general public and conciliate the doctors who furnish free service."

The other witnesses were Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent of the hospital; Dr. Thomas Lee, Washington physician, and Dr. Charles W. Bartlett, of Tampa, Fla.

George F. Hoover, of counsel for the A. M. A., said yesterday he intended to file a motion this week asking the court to call in the grand jury and instruct them as to the law. In this way, said Hoover, "we hope to have the court decide as to whether the medical profession is a trade."

Figure skaters will hold the spotlight at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace tomorrow night when a two-hour period, from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m., will be set aside for their convenience.

During that time, William Swallender, Baltimore professional and teacher of Dorothy Snell, youthful local girl who was runner-up in the junior national figure skating championships last year, will give lessons. Besides Miss Snell, others who will take a lesson include "Red" Bainbridge, 8-year-old former juvenile champion of California, and Betty Earle, well-known local skater.

Over the Coffee

48 HOURS ON BROADWAY

One of the big laughs on Broadway this season occurs in the musical comedy "Leave It to Me," when the American Ambassador to Moscow kicks the Nazi Ambassador in the stomach, in the hope that this will cause Cordell Hull and Franklin Roosevelt to recall him.

Mrs. Davies . . . jollied?

But he is not recalled—because "everybody has been waiting for somebody to kick a Nazi in the stomach" . . . So far, no protest from Hitler.

• • • •

This comedy is obviously a travesty on the appointment of Joe Davies as our Russian Ambassador, with a wealthy campaign contributor forced to take the post because his wife wants to go places in a big way . . . She complains bitterly that the Kennedys got the London job because they have nine children to her five.

• • • •

"—his kick is popular"

As I watched Lucius Boomer, the gourmet, eat a dish of cornflakes at the Waldorf, I was reminded of the Frenchman who, at the first Epicures' dinner in Washington, was asked if he had any complaint about the food.

"Everything was superb," he replied, hesitantly and tactfully, "except that it struck me the chervil, the herb in the soup, was not chopped quite fine enough."

• • • •

At the last dinner of the Epicures once again Fougner, the great American epicure, turned to the same Frenchman and asked him whether anything was wrong this year. Again the Frenchman spoke reluctantly.

"But everything was superb!" he said. "Except that the chervil this year was chopped perhaps a trifle, just a thought, too fine!"

(Whereupon another gourmet pointed out indignantly that chervil is too delicate to be chopped, quel horreur; it must be plucked!)

When a hard-working Secretary of the Treasury indulges in a bit of hadinage, it's worth repeating. Recently at a dinner at the home of another Cabinet member, when the coffee was passed to men in the library, the Argentine Ambassador, Senor Espil, declined the small cup offered him.

Near him stood Mr. Morgenthau, who knows the wheaty Argentinians and the coffee producing Brazilians have had a little spat about wheat and coffee.

"What!" said Mr. Morgenthau. "You won't drink a little coffee to help your friends the Brazilians?"

"—only in line of duty"

Any Russian except a diplomat who appeared regularly in silk hat, white tie and tails would run the risk of liquidation, but the Soviet ambassadors and their staffs must wear them occasionally—with acute distaste, no doubt—in the line of duty.

An Englishman vows that he has positive knowledge that the cost of a new evening suit appeared on a Russ diplomat's expense account under the heading of "working clothes."

Major Wins Right To Act as Attorney

Justice Jennings Bailey ruled in a test case yesterday that a retired officer of the Army has the right to appear as an attorney before the Treasury Department in any matter not involving a claim against the United States.

The decision arose out of a suit brought by Maj. Leonard L. Barrett, a New York lawyer, against Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and other Treasury officials, to compel them to permit him to act as an attorney before the department.

The Treasury held that Barrett is an officer of the Government and, as such, could not appear in any case involving the Government.

Justice Bailey, however, held that Barrett is not an "officer . . . in the employ of the United States" within the meaning of the restrictions. "His pay," said the court, "is rather in the nature of a pension that compensation for services performed." Barrett was retired for disability incurred in service.

Two Citizens Groups Assail Privilege Tax

Columbia Hgts. Body Opposes Any New Levies, Asks Congress Pay 'Lawful Share'

Two District citizens associations last night condemned the business privilege tax, and came out in favor of a sales tax. A third group attacked all proposals for new taxes here, insisting that the Federal Government should pay "its lawful share" of District expenses.

Randle Highlands

Randle Highlands Citizens Association voted in favor of a sales tax for the District, and urged discontinuance of the business privilege tax. The group also opposed a proposed income tax, and urged an increase in public utility taxes, excepting gas.

The unit joined Summit Park, Hillcrest, and Fort Davis associations in asking for an addition to the Randle Highlands School; for grading and opening of Thirtieth street southeast, south of S street, so pupils in the Hillcrest area may have a direct route to the school, and for earliest possible acquisition of a school site in the vicinity of Pennsylvania and Alabama avenues southeast.

The Commissioners' recommendation for turning on street lights earlier was approved. Complaints were lodged against the inefficiency of the 3-year-old heating plant at Randle Highlands School, charging that classroom temperatures hovered in the 50s during the recent cold spell.

The group also urged raising the curb along the Pennsylvania avenue southeast parkway, and better care of the park.

Birch Bayh, director of physical education in District schools, discussed the schools' football program and policy.

Columbia Heights

Columbia Heights Citizens Association attacked proposals for new taxes in the District, asserting the Federal Government has failed to assume it: share of the financial burden of District government.

"Any deficit that may occur in the District budget is not caused by insufficient taxation of Washingtonians," George H. Brown said. "It is because the Federal Government has not borne its lawful share of the District's expense." A resolution calling on the next Congress to "live up to its lawful obligation "in support of the District government was adopted.

Members also asked the next Congress to abolish the status of all persons "residing in and enjoying the privileges of the District" who have lived here over three years but still maintain voting rights in other States.

"In order to insure equality among residents of the District, persons who vote in other States should not have this power, or the Constitution should be amended so that District residents would be given representation and a voice in the Federal Government," the resolution read.

James J. McGuire, of the Department of Justice, showed the FBI film, "You Can't Get Away With It," and explained functions of the FBI's police training school.

Hampshire Heights

Harold D. Johnson was elected president of Hampshire Heights Citizens Association. Other new officers are J. Leon Bord, vice president; George W. Fessenden, secretary; Mrs. Dora C. Leizear, treasurer.

The group, meeting for the second time, accepted a constitution and by-laws drafted by a committe, and urged residents of the area to decorate their front yards in the spirit of the Christmas season.

North Cleveland Park

North Cleveland Park Citizens Association reaffirmed its stand in favor of a District sales tax, and voted against the present business tax. It also opposed a proposed tax on chain stores. The group intends to press its stand at the meeting of the District Federation Saturday. William R. Burgess was inducted into membership.

Police Sergeant Unhorsed When Cycle Hits Bump

A motorcycle unseated Sergt. J. O. Hite, of the Police Traffic Bureau, yesterday and whirled riderless through a full block of rush-hour traffic before straightening out to smash into a car pulled up to the curb to permit fire engines to pass.

Hite, hurled to the pavement when the motorcycle sidecar struck a hole at Twelfth and H streets northwest, suffered severe cuts, bruises and possibly a wrenched back. He was at the time in pursuit of a motorist who cut in front of a fire engine.

The damaged auto was driven by Harry R. Stevens, 7017 Fifth street northwest.

Germs Fiercer Than Animals, Says Zoo Head

Lauds Medicine For Saving Life in Out-of-Way Places

Disease and not ferocious animals was the greater danger while hunting specimens for the Washington Zoo, Dr. William M. Mann, director, said last night.

Dr. Mann gave the medical profession credit for saving his life many times in out-of-the-way places in Africa, Asia and the East Indies in an address to the Smith-Reed-Russell Society of the George Washington University Medical School.

But not once, he told the society's annual meeting at the Army and Navy Club, has his life been endangered by one of the many animals he has captured for the Zoo. It was disease, he said, that laid him low every time.

University President Cloyd Heck Marvin and Dr. Walter H. Bloedorn, acting dean of the medical school, were the other speakers at the gathering. Lawrence A. Rapee, society president, was toastmaster.

Installed as honorary members of the society were Rear Admiral Edward R. Stitt, former surgeon general of the Navy, and Dr. Rolph W. Barris and Dr. James W. Watts, members of the faculty. The following were introduced into society membership:

Forbes H. Burgess, Jacob M. Danish, Walter T. Flaherty, Gordon C. Hall, Roy B. Hammond, David James, Elizabeth Kahler, Ellis W. Posnjak, Joseph M. Freedman, Ernest A. Gould, John R. Grunwell, Camp S. Huntington, Dorothy S. Jaeger, Charles E. Law, Maurice Mensh and William H. Stimson.

Hall Is Named Governor of Colonial Group

Peregrine White's Descendant Succeeds Dr. A. C. Stanley

Gilbert Lewis Hall, prominent Washington attorney and Arlington County civic leader, last night was named governor of the District of Columbia Society of Colonial Wars, at the annual meeting in the Hotel Mayflower.

A member of the District Society since 1922, and an officer for the past nine years, Hall was named to succeed Dr. A. Camp Stanley, who has held the governorship for three years.

Hall is a member of the firm of Clephane, Latimer and Hall, and of the George Washington Law School faculty. A resident of Clarendon, Va., he is a member of the Arlington County Hospital Board, and the county board of zoning appeals.

Descendant of Pilgrims

He holds membership in the society as a descendant of Peregrine White, born on the Mayflower in Cape Cod Harbor, the first child born to Pilgrim parents in America. Hall served as secretary seven years, and deputy governor two years.

Other officers named were Laurence Leonard, deputy governor; William Howe Somervell, lieutenant governor; Harryman Dorsey, secretary; Richard Epps Shands, deputy secretary; Robert Copeland Jones, treasurer; Mahlon Hopkins Janney, registrar; Dr. Henry R. Evans, deputy registrar; Dr. Walter A. Wells, historian; Dr. Thomas E. Green, chaplain; Col. Edward A. Harriman, chancellor; Lieut. Col. Edgar Erskine Hume, surgeon, and Albert B. Van Voorhees, custodian of the colors.

Council Chosen

Dr. Arthur Camp Stanley, Fulton Lewis and William Marbury Beall were elected members of the council. The committee on membership included Mahlon Hopkins Janney, chairman; Dr. Roscoe J. C. Dorsey, Dr. Edson L. Whitney, Dr. Henry R. Evans and Charles C. Glover.

Members of the committee on historical documents elected were Dr. Walter A. Wells, chairman; Charles Colfax Long, Dr. Andrew Stewart, Caleb Clarke Magruder and Charles Sumner Lobingier.

Seth W. Richardson, former Assistant Attorney General, who spoke during the banquet which preceded election of officers, called for defense of the Constitution as essential to the continued life of the country. Maj. Frank Bolles Wakeman, M. C., U. S. A., was elected a member of the society.

Holdup Nets $20 At Gas Station

Speakers See U.S. Gain in Latin Lands

Sen. Green, Mason, Truitt Find Trade There Increasing Despite Fascists

A United States Senator, a member of the Maritime Commission, and a member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority last night agreed that the United States was not only holding its own against Nazi-Fascist-Japanese penetration in Latin America, but actually was making gains.

Speaking before 800 persons at the first night's session of the annual conference sponsored by the Inter-American Center of George Washington University, held at the United States Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, they warned that the United States must continue and expand the "good neighbor" policy advocated by President Roosevelt.

General subject of the three-day forum is: "Can the United States Retain Latin American Trade and Cultural Relations Against German, Italian and Japanese Competition?"

Senator Green Speaks

Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who recently toured Latin America, declared that contrary to popular belief, this country's trade with its Southern neighbors increased last year, whereas that of Germany dropped slightly.

George Grant Mason, jr., chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority Committee on Foreign Relations, asserted that dominance of American aviation and airlines in Latin America tipped the scales in favor of United States business.

Max O'Rell Truitt, maritime commissioner, maintained that the United States could advance in both trade and cultural relations, despite Nazi-Fascist activities, to the material and political benefit of the 21 American republics.

Pointing out there had been great progress by the American republic in understanding and co-operation, Senator Green said:

"The Latin American nations—like ourselves—do not want to have the methods of co-operation dictated to them."

Calls for Cultural Progress

Green declared that the Pan American program inaugurated by the Maritime Commission and export-import bank, and Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade agreements were encouraging commerce. He disclosed the United States supplied 34.3 per cent of Latin America's imports in 1937 (compared to 31.5 in 1936) whereas Germany's share fell from 15.4 to 15.3.

As to cultural relations, the Senator remarked that increased action was needed by the United States Government and private agencies. On his recent trip, he said, "I noted the great influence of European culture, and the almost complete lack of any influence of corresponding North American culture."

Mason warned that "the taxation of certain European political systems to portions of this continent might endanger our peace and happiness." But, he added, American pioneering in Latin-American aviation still gave this country an advantage, an advantage being challenged today in Germany and Italy. He said:

"The time is past when it can be doubted that aviation is being used by Italy and Germany as one of the means of winning vast trade markets and perhaps a political foothold in our neighbor to the south."

Truitt Gives Talk

Maritime Commissioner Truitt said that the "perpetuation of the democratic process is coming to be an even greater responsibility of 'The Americas'." He added, "Germany and Italy have made politics—political ideologies — practically their most important export to South America."

He warned that while Fascist penetration has not been great, it was not to be ignored or even looked upon complacently. The Maritime Commission is concentrating all its efforts on enhancing the "good neighbor" policy, Truitt said.

Following the talks, a discussion was held, the panel including Albert W. Atwood, financial writer; James C. Corliss, G. W. U. economics professor; Roy T. Davis, president of National Park College and former minister to Panama, and Frederic W. Wile, Washington newspaperman. Dean Elmer L. Kayser presided.

Takoma Park Library Association Celebrates Birthday

The third anniversary of the Takoma Park Library Association was celebrated last night with the presentation of a plaque listing names of library founders. 3,000 See 'Streamlined Fair' Of Resaurant Association

Guests Get Coffee, Oysters, Pie, Ice Cream, Milk Shakes, View Aids to Cooking; Members Have Early Birds' Breakfast

District and national restaurant leaders yesterday converted the east corridor of the Mayflower Hotel into a modern streamlined "country fair" where the latest mechanical aids in cooking were grouped with masterpieces of local chefs in a display that attracted more than 3,000 persons.

The exhibit was arranged for guests of the three-day regional convention of the National Restaurant Association. About 4,000 cups of coffee and seven barrels of oysters were given away during the day, officials estimated, and the list included pie, ice cream, milk shakes, pickles, olives and other delicacies.

Members Breakfast

In rooms adjoining the fair, members of the association began the second day of the convention with an "early birds' breakfast," highlighted by a style show of uniforms and costumes worn by employes of local restaurants.

Later members were quizzed by I. O. Dahl, of the Restaurant Management Magazine in New York, on details of food preparation and service.

Roy W. Cooley, of Evanston, Ill., president of the national association, traced the spread of the restaurant industry. He said one out of every six persons employed in the retail business works in the restaurant industry. Half a million persons receive employment in restaurants, with a total annual pay roll of $500,000,000, he said.

Employe Gets Cup

In evening ceremonies, A. H. Dressel, director of the Washington Restaurant Association, presented a gold cup for the longest service in a Washington restaurant to Miss Margaret Slack, who has been employed with the Lotos Lantern 24 years. Other awards went to Miss Tessie Peterson, runner-up with 19 years at the Pomona Restaurant; Miss Mary Lytle, 13 years at Park Lane Inn, and Miss Mildred Allen, 12 years at the Gordon Tea Shop.

Other speakers included Col. Samuel Snapp, and Miss Margaret Canavan, of Standard Brands, Inc., New York, and George Henderson, of the American Gas Association, New York.

Mechanical highlights of the display included a machine for sterilizing, washing and drying 200 pieces of silver in one operation, a broiler which combines gas and charcoal and turns out steaks in 3 to 13 minutes, a glass washer which sterilizes and dries in 5 seconds.

Burton Elected Police President

Private Ralph E. Burton was elected president of the District Policemen's Association yesterday in a race with Lieut. Frank A. Varney who was standing for re-election.

Voting took place in all precincts and headquarters throughout the day. Ballots were counted last night. The count also showed:

Park Policeman Raymond F. Selby elected vice president; George H. Redlick, second vice president; Joseph S. Davis, recording secretary; Harden N. Lancaster, financial secretary; Edgar C. Waller, treasurer; William J. Wagner, trustee, and Sergt. Harry Blackman, Frank Ach and Detective Sergt. Henry Jett, members of the legislative committee.

William Shinnott, 80, Struck by Auto

William F. Shinnott, 80, of 915 Delafield place northwest, suffered a fractured leg and severe head injuries last night when he was struck by an automobile at Georgia avenue and Decatur street northwest. Police said the driver of the car was John C. Aukward, 18, of 1222 Ingraham street northwest.

In a collision on Seventh street between R and S streets northwest, Henry Van Diver, 39, colored, 1501 Seventh street northwest, suffered fractures of the leg and arm.

Oyster Shuckers Return to Jobs

Calvert County's first organized strike ended yesterday as about 225 oyster shuckers returned to their jobs in four large southern Maryland packing houses along the western shore under police guard.

Warren Denton, owner of the packing house at Broome's Island, where 100 men walked out, said about half of his men were back and that owners of other affected plants at Solomon's Island and St. Leonard's Creek reported the back-to-work movement was virtually 100 per cent. No disturbances were reported.

Denton said he expected all of his workers to return to work today, since many were left without transportation yesterday.

Workers complained of a wage cut of 5 cents per gallon of oysters shucked from their shells. Owners of the four plants gave them until Wednesday to return to work, warning they would close for the season if the strike continued.

TakomansFind Library Has Quintupled

1,000 Books HaveGrown To 5,000 in 3 Years; Founders Are Honored

Three years of progress from a collection of less than 1,000 volumes to 5,000 was observed last night by the Takoma Park Library Association at its annual meeting at Takoma Park, Md.

Highlight of the anniversary celebration was presentation of a bronze plaque bearing names of founders of the library by Mrs. James A. Robertson, wife of the Maryland State archivist and member of the Takoma library's board of trustees.

Mrs. A. L. Conger, also a trustee, outlined history of the library from its inception in a small rented building up to acquisition of its present building as a permanent location, the former home of Col. and Mrs. Conger on Sherman avenue.

The free public library is maintained entirely by volunteer workers. Officers of the board of trustees elected last night included Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, president; Dr. F. L. Lewton, vice president; W. D. Lambert, secretary; Mrs. C. C. Waters, treasurer, and Mrs. James A. Robertson, Mrs. A. L. Conger, Mrs. B. Shanks Chaney, Mrs. J. Bond Shaw and Walter Harman, members.

Founders listed on the bronze plaque included C. D. and M. G. Blachly, F. L. and B. S. Chaney, A. L. and M. G. Conger, J. W. and A. E. Dudley, W. F. and M. E. Fischer, W. R. and M. C. W. Gregg, C. Schools Need $30,000,000, Says Ballou

Declares They Are Entitled to Third of D. C. Budget; Cites Lack of Teachers

With more than $30,000,000 of unmet needs, the schools of Washington are entitled to 30 per cent of the entire District of Columbia budget and their friends will seek that amount at the next session of Congress, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, declared last night at a meeting of the Petworth Parent-Teacher Association.

"We are now getting about 26 per cent," Dr. Ballou said.

He declared that "one of the greatest calamities ever visited on the schools of the city" came when the District Commissioners recommended that the tax rate be lowered from $1.75 to $1.50.

Bemoans Fewer Teachers

"All during the depression we have had to get along on less and less. One hardly knows what to do when organizations such as the Board of Trade petitions Congress not to increase the school budget. Not to increase it, of course, means that we must get along on less. We have 500 fewer teachers in relation to the school population today than we had in 1927. We asked for 240 new teachers last year and got 15 in all.

"The effect is on the boys and girls and not on us," he said.

The latest hardship under which the schools have had to labor, Dr. Ballou declared, is the cut in the heat and light budget.

"Thank goodness summer lasted until mid-November. Let's all ask for an early spring. There's not much we can do about cutting down our light bill, but if the weather hits right we may be able to do something about the coal.

Save on Coal Bills

"We're having a meeting of the Board of Education tomorrow to see whether we can get through the winter on the $300,000 given us for heating and lighting expenses. If we cannot make it we just will have to shut off school activities," he said.

Dr. Ballou said school schedules have been changed, community center programs rearranged, and a program of real economy inaugurated in an effort to save on coal bills.

"We are hoping the District Commissioners will ask more for us in the first deficiency bill, if it is made clear we just can't shut off any more lights—or if we have a long, hard winter," he declared.

The possibility that schools may have to be closed as a result of the heat economy wave is a "very real one and not just a newspaper scare," Dr. Ballou said.

He told the audience that the Board of Education will have before it today consideration of the liquor-store question in the Petworth neighborhood. "We have never voted for a Class C store in this community. There is every reason to think you will have a greater school population as the years increase. We will keep that in mind," he said.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Dramatic School' Really Launches Fledglings

Many Youngsters in New Luise Rainer Film; Barthelmess on Belasco Screen Today; Theatrical Long-Shots and Close-ups

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER seldom does anything half-way. If it sets out to make a picture conceived in the spirit of ambitious youth, it not only peoples it with young and enthusiastic players, but insures the true flavor of youthful hope, dreams, foibles, disappointments, minor tragedies and major triumphs by weaving into the story something of the gossamer elements of "Cinderella," "Daddy Longlegs," "Peter Pan," "Stage Door" and "Joan of Arc."

BELL

That is more or less what has been done in "Dramatic School," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday and previewed by the drama desks yesterday afternoon. While the cast of this subject is ballasted by the mature talents of a suitable number of tried-and-true artists—Henry Stephenson, Genevieve Tobin, Gale Sondergaard, Margaret Dumont, Melville Cooper and Erik Rhodes, to name only those of prime importance—it also catalogues the names of a surprising number of gifted young players who turn out to be fully entitled to the trust that has been reposed in them.

The star of the picture, of course, is Luise Rainer, the fragile young girl who works in a gas meter factory all night in order that she may study acting in the National Academy of France all day. The Wages and Hours Law hadn't got around to Paris yet. Among her closest associates at the feet of Thespis are such up-and-coming youngsters as Lana Turner, Anthony Allen, Virginia Grey, Ann Rutherford, Rand Brooks, Jean Chatburn, Marie Blake and Dorothy Granger. Fitting in with Miss Rainer, between frivolous youth and seasoned maturity, are Paulette Goddard, Alan Marshall, Cecilia C. Callejo and Frank Puglia. It is a breezy exposition of an imaginative and fanciful story that these judiciously graduated novices and veterans put on.

No other kind of a performance would do for "Dramatic School." The story, as I have said, is an unusual blending of a thousand elusive elements not ordinarily encountered in a single piece of dramatic writing. It ranges from gay cafe life to the sordidness of poverty and deprivation, but usually is lifted into the clouds by the elfin quality of Miss Rainer's portrayal of the ethereal little factory girl touched with a fairy wand.

In structure and purpose, "Dramatic School" is vaguely like "Stage Door." It also is so suggestive of an amazing number of other things that this nebulous resemblance never becomes sufficiently obtrusive to be a handicap.

And when all those youngsters get going, you'll really have fun.

"Dramatic School," by the way, has been utilized by some as a medium for putting the finger on the "fourteen luckiest young actors in Hollywood." They were the male members of the cast who signed on the dotted line to appear as members of the dramatic classes in the picture. They are Edward Arnold, jr., who has elected to follow in the footsteps of his celebrated dad; William Stelling, William Tanner, Arthur Gardner, Kenneth Stevens, Louis Adlon, Lyle Morraine, Warren McCullen, Jack Daniels, Ray Bush, Eddie Price, Bob Parrish, Eric Efron and George Travell. These boys are beginning their careers in pretty fast company. To get the job, each young actor had to be a good enough actor to act like a novice who didn't know how to act—if you can make that add up!

Due to the reorganization of the dance group, the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau announces the cancellation of the engagement of the Mordkin Ballet, originally scheduled for today and tomorrow at the Rialto Theater. Scoring a personal hit in New York, Patricia Bowman, prima ballerina with the ballet and a native Washingtonian, was eagerly awaited by her many friends in the Capital. Her appearance is a pleasure only deferred. Mr. Smith further announces that the group will be presented at the Rialto later in the current season.

Tickets for the canceled performances may be redeemed at the T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau, 910 G street.

Tonight in the Capital, however, will not be devoid of terpsichorean divertissement. Under the sponsorship of the Community Center Department, Jose Limon and Evelyn Davis, two rising young exponents of the modern dance, will appear in the Roosevelt High School Auditorium this evening. Limon has danced in "Americana," "As Thousands Cheer," "Lysistrata" and other Broadway productions. Miss Davis needs no introduction to Washington audiences, having appeared here with her dancing ensemble on several occasions.

An eleventh-hour bulletin from the Belasco Theater brings word that "Spy of Napoleon," an English-made picture, will supplant "Orage" as chief screen feature of the bill, beginning today. It will come as a pleasant surprise to the public that Richard Barthelmess returns to the American screen as star of this Napoleonic subject. Costarred with him is Dolly Haas.

"Spy of Napoleon" is an adaptation of the story by Baroness Orczy, whose "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "The Emperor's Candlesticks" already are known to picturegoers.

As an added attraction, the Belasco will present "Love on Skis" ("Slalom"), a thrilling romance of the Swiss Alps.

One suspects that the members of the I. L. G. W. U. Players' cast in "Pins and Needles," at the National, are acutely aware that they are presenting their novel revue in a theater of too large proportions to preserve the essential intimacy of a musical satire that presents no great hordes of principals or massively impressive settings. I imagine that in their own little Princess Theater, in New York, the effectiveness of the sketches, ensembles and solo numbers that comprise the two acts and 19 scenes would gain at least 100 per cent in value through the closer and more intimate association of actors and audience. Rumors are floating around that so conscious were the Labor Stage people of the requirements of the National that new recruits were rushed down from New York to fill in the stage chinks, so to speak, during the Washington engagement. Everything considered, the boys and girls from the workrooms are doing a grand job of embryonic theater.

Ol' Massa Ed Kuykendall, president of the national organization of Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, seems to be sneaking up on the Capital City by slow degrees. The last time he was previously heard from, Ol' Massa Ed was presiding over the M. P. T. O. A. convention in Oklahoma City. Now comes a pretty postage card, "just to say hello," bearing a Charlotte, N. C., postmark. All right, fella, come on, pop in here and cut out all this needless suspense.

When you see "The Citadel," opening tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, you will observe a particularly ingratiating performance of the role of the proprietress of the modest little cafe in which Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell pursue their unique romance. It will be offered by Mary Clare. Mary Clare, in case you had forgotten, is the sterling actress for whom Noel Coward wrote his memorable historical pageant of "Cavalcade." She distinguished herself in the English theater also in Jerome K. Jerome's morality play of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and in "The Constant Nymph." "Cavalcade, not that it matters, ran a solid year at the Drury Lane Theater in London. The Fox picturization did pretty well in this country, too—won the Academy award as the "best picture of the year" in the season of its release.

Back in 1898, when Willard Holcomb, eminent critic, publicist and playwright, occupied this desk on The Post, he elevated a cub reporter from the City Room to the post of his assistant in the dramatic department. This young fellow showed keen aptitude for the work and went on to write, in time, 31 plays, two novels, six short stories and to serve as drama critic for Ainslee's, Smart Set and The Green Book magazines. His name was Channing Pollock.

The point of all this is that the FBI Theater Players, who take to the drama for relaxation from their official duties under J. Edgar Hoover, in the Department of Justice, will produce Mr. Pollock's play of "The Enemy" as their next extra-curricular undertaking. It is scheduled for presentation on December 15.

The "enemy" to which the author refers is the hatred and animosity that man breeds and nurses in his heart against his fellow men. More of this later, you're afraid!

Personal aside to Miss Alva M. Joesting, Copley Courts: I don't see much the matter with Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, either. And many thanks for an extremely interesting letter.

Stone Plans to Be Judge Rest of Life

After 40 years on the stage and screen, Lewis Stone has found a role he can play all the rest of his life. And he intends to play it, for Stone is resolved never to retire.

"I have enjoyed a rich and full life," said Stone, "but it has never been so pleasant as it is right now. Playing Judge Hardy has given me a new future and something to work for. No character I have created seems so worth while. I feel that I am on intimate terms with my audience and that we have a mutual understanding, one with the other."

". . . and the baby has added one more word to his vocabulary . . . He can say 'Yah' . . . Well, act pleased . . . What? It's nothing? . . . Listen, dear—if he can say 'Yah,' he can vote—in Germany."

12 P. M.: "If your new play, 'Angela is 22,' gets the Pulitzer Prize, would you accept it?" Sinclair Lewis—who once rejected the prize—is asked at the Tavern. "Well," he replies, "I'm a temperate prize-accepter—but not a teetotaler" . . . "Don't believe the story that Paulette Goddard has been assigned the role of Scarlett O'Hara," a film official declares at the Cotton Club. "Eleanor Lynn, now playing in Odets' 'Racket to the Moon,' was screen-tested for Scarlett yesterday" . . . "The Hartmanns were invited to Sally Clark's wedding, but wired their regrets at being unable to atend, because of a new job in Detroit," Eddy Duchin relates at the Persian Room. "Sally wired back: 'Sorry you can't come, but hope your run will be as long as mine.'"

1 A. M.: "Well, on December 17 Billy Rose will convert his place back into a theater, and will offer two-a-day vaudeville instead," an official states at the Casa Manana. "Local No. 16, of the Waiters Union, wanted a 30 per cent increase. With this increase to all the service unions, it would have cost Rose $75,000 a year more" . . . "Sam Goldwyn was considering a movie about the Florodora Sextette," a Hollywood agent informs at the Paradise. "He wanted to hire the original girls, and said: 'There must be at least 10 or 12 of them still around'" . . . "Craig Wood, the golf pro, took a screen-test last week," a ringside reports at the Cubana . . . "When 'You Can't Take It With You' closed Saturday," Margot Stevenson confides at the St. Regis, "after a two-year run, Sam Harris wired all of us: 'Better luck next time.'"

2 A. M. "Albert Ammons' song, 'Boogie-Woogie Stomp,' was awarded first prize for swing records by Life magazine," a musician reports at the Tokay. "Ammons now works at Gill's Tavern, in Chicago, for $3 a night, three nights a week. He'll appear at Carnegie Hall two days before Christmas" . . . "Mayor LaGuardia and T. A. C. are arranging a Christmas tree tieup," a municipal official tells Terry Lawlor at El Rio. "The Christmas trees in city parks will be lit by 25-cent contributions—which will go to the German refugees" . . . "The papers missed it," a reporter advises at the Yacht Club. "On Wednesday a swank Fifth avenue department store invited 900 of its best male customers. Thirty models, hired for $75 each, did an advertising strip-tease, from fur coats down to undies."

3 A. M.: "Mel Shane, the Paramount producer, is related to Adolf Zukor, who just was removed from power," a publisher informs at Leon and Eddie's. "So Shane tendered his resignation, to take effect after his current picture—called 'Thanks for the Memory'" . . . Mrs. Pat Campbell, who hates remembering names, was introduced to a screen star for the sixth time," an agent relates at the Black Cat. "When Mrs. Campbell asked her name the exasperated actress replied: 'Mrs. Pat Campbell' . . . 'Oh, no it isn't, replied Mrs. Campbell, because Mrs. Pat Campbell is an actress.'"

4 A. M.: "Harold Sterner was one of the architects who designed the National Commander Headquarters Building at the World's Fair," a publicist relates at El Morocco. "Winthrop Aldrich and Mrs. Vincent Astor are associated with it, and the plans were altered completely. Then they discovered they forgot the cornerstone, for publicity pictures. A World's Fair official told 'em not to worry—because in the last ten official pictures, the same 'cornerstone' was used. And it's only a wooden box, painted to look like stone."

5 A. M.: "I've got to stay up and catch a specially chartered plane for Philadelphia," Orson Welles confesses at Lindy's. "My radio sponsors, Campbell's Soup, insists that I go to their factory and taste all their soups. Otherwise, they say, I wouldn't have the necessary 'feel,' in my radio work for them" . . . "It looks like those radio companies' artists bureaus will go," a legalite declares at Longchamps, "before this monopoly investigation is over" . . . "The Associated Press assigned Mary Morris, the camerawoman, to accompany Debutante Catherine Gamble, on a deb's typical lazy day's rounds," an editor reports at Dave's. "This was the 'lazy' routine: Rise at 10:30, to the doctor's, to dressmaker, to Stork for lunch, hairdresser, Versailles for Red Cross collections, charity committee meeting, cocktails at St. Regis, tea at home, Vanderbilt debut—at which time the photographer quit!"

6 A. M.: ". . . and did you do as I told you to—take that last ride on the Sixth Avenue 'El', before it's demolished? . . . Well, how was it? Yes, I know it was your first trip downtown that way . . . What, dear? . . . This is a helluva time to discover it was the fastest way."

Star Can't Watch Fight He Isn't In

For an entire morning Charles Bickford watched Robert Taylor and Wallace Beery stage a bare-knuckle fight for scenes of "Stand Up and Fight." When the battle resumed after lunch, Bickford was sitting outside the sound stage, reading a magazine.

"I can't go back in there and watch them without wanting to get into the scrap," he explained. "In my last picture I have five fights. In this one I get killed off before I have a chance to take a poke at anybody."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 6.—We're playing our favorite indoor game here—inconsistency. Must be the lack of rain; we're so dry, we're about to blow up. Last year Hal Roach entertained Il Duce's favorite son, Vittorio, at a great, gala party. Our glamorous stars were proud to be photographed dancing with him. But when lush reports of his reception were aired about the country—and found disfavor—the same stars felt differently about it. Then he found himself most unwelcome.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now Leni Riefenstahl, supposed to be Hitler's erstwhile girl friend, can't even get a peek through a keyhole. They've been closed tighter than a drum.

For "Each Dawn I Die," Warners have already lined up John Garfield, James Cagney and Burgess Meredith. Warners would have you believe they've retitled Zorina's play, "I Married an Angel—With a Dirty Face." And the one thing feared in that picture was that the public wouldn't know whether Cagney turned yellow or was a glorified murderer. The public still doesn't know, but Warners are in on the controversy.

It's nice to know that Lou Fields, of Weber and Fields, is really playing himself in "The Castles." Last time a studio sent for him, they looked him over and said, "Well, you're Fields, all right, but you don't look like him." They got another actor for the part.

Bob Grant and the rest of his orchestra appeared as usual at the Troc the other night, only to find it closed. The circular bar, which they'd spent weeks building but never used, had already been carted away. Bob's father-in-law, who owns the place, certainly knows how to keep a secret—didn't even notify his son-in-law. Funny thing about the Troc—when it was unpretentious and patterned after its namesake in Paris, you couldn't get a toe-hold in it. After it went swank, it lost its coziness.

Now, everybody's jamming into La Conga, where you can let down your hair and have fun. You would have paid cash on the line to see Irene Castle do the Conga, and our girls could take lessons in grace from Irene.

I found myself at a table with Barbara Trippett, who chatters about airy nothings so entertainingly, and Harry Crocker, who packs an awful lot of information in that column of his. He said a friend damned him with faint praise. He called my column "benign." Harry has a grand sense of humor and interpolated Russian steps into his rhumba, which Walter Pidgeon tried to imitate, but when that foot of his came up into the spotlight you would have thought it was a Singer midget. The boys are ganging up on Pidge; he danced with Roger Marchetti's new beauty, got her telephone number. What he really got was Rogers', and is he in for a surprise when he calls!

Howard Hughes and Norma Shearer seem to be making dining a habit, I mean together.

Roosevelt To Light Tree Christmas Eve

Ceremony in Lafayette Park to Be Broadcast Over 160 Stations

For the sixth time, President Roosevelt will press the button lighting the Nation's Christmas tree on Christmas Eve as highlight of annual ceremonies broadcast throughout the United States over 160 radio stations.

It will be the sixteenth annual lighting of the National Community Christmas tree, which first was lighted by President Coolidge in the Ellipse. The tree this year will be in Lafayette Park.

President Roosevelt, who will only have to cross Pennsylvania avenue from the White House, will arrive in Lafayette Park at 5 p. m., December 24, and will deliver his Christmas greeting to the Nation over coast-to-coast radio hookups at 5:11 p. m., after first lighting the tree. He will speak seven minutes.

Ceremonies in the park will open at 4:30 p. m. with a 30-minute concert by the Marine Band. Dr. Albert J. McCartney will deliver the invocation and introductory remarks will be made by Representative Ross A. Collins, after which Boy and Girl Scouts of Washington will deliver the Nation's Christmas greetings to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Christmas carols will be led by the Schola Cantorum, with Arturo Papalardo directing. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, of Georgetown University, will offer the benediction.

The National Tree, sponsored by the Community Center department of District public schools, the American Forestry Association and the office of National Capital Parks, will be placed in Lafayette Park about a week before Christmas. It will appear as a "singing tree" through hidden amplifiers concealed throughout its branches.

Officers of the Christmas tree executive committee include Mrs. E. K. Peeples, of the Community Center Department, chairman; Ovid Butler, of the American Forrestry Association, vice chairman, and C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, vice chairman.

Power, Warmth Mark Recital Of Frauenheim

Artist Turns His Piano Into Remarkably Lyrical Instrument

Norman Frauenheim presented a recital in which his piano became a remarkably lyrical instrument last night in the Sulgrave Club. The varied program called for a wide range of pianistic abilities, all of which the local artist was able to supply. But it was in the numbers with a song that he shone brightest.

Specifically Mr. Frauenheim played his Chopin group with real warmth in the fingers devoted to the melody. His feeling showed to advantage in the very tuneful Nocturne in F-sharp minor. In addition to warmth there was power in those fingers to make the brooding Polonaise in E-flat minor convincing, and two Mazurkas (F-sharp minor and A-flat major) move briskly. Finishing this group with three Etudes he showed he can meet the great composer's stiffest demands without forcing his technique to the limit.

The most taxing numbers Mr. Frauenheim disposed of before the program intermission: a Liszt transcription of Bach's organ Prelude and Fugue in A minor; Haydn's Variations in F minor; a Mozart Rondo in A minor; Beethoven's Sonata in D minor, and a Toccata by Schumann. Mr. Frauenheim was mild-mannered in his Beethoven and Bach interpretations, but was yet forceful because of his clean touch and clear phrasing. Again it was the lyricism that was the strongest element of the performance.

Three Debussy preludes, "Reflections in the Water," "Girl With the Flaxen Hair," and "Wind in the Plains," were presented with extremely sensitive playing. Two Paderewski compositions, the B-flat Nocturne and "Cracovienne Fantastique," brought the recital to a robust close.

J. W.

T. Tertius Noble, Mus. Doc., in an organ recital Tuesday evening at the Washington Cathedral. Program of organ works by Dr. Noble, Handel, Gliere, Moussorgsky, Rebikow, Karg-Elert, Yon and J. S. Bach.

It was singularly appropriate that for the backbone of his program last night Dr. Noble, who is celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary as organist of St. Thomas' Church in New York, should have chosen the works of the organist of another St. Thomas'.

For although Johann Sebastian Bach wrote his music for Leipzig of the eighteenth century, it could scarcely have been performed with anything like the technical perfection to which we of the twentieth have become accustomed. Furthermore, few of the composers who write for the twentieth century organ have achieved anywhere near so much as he did.

The program opened auspiciously with Dr. Noble's own Toccata and Fugue in F Minor, a broad, lofty work which was heard to great effect on the impressive instrument recently installed in the Cathedral. This was followed by a quiet, flowing prelude, "St. Peter," also by Dr. Noble. The dignified spirit of Handel, always reminiscent of a church by Sir Christopher Wren, was fine and excellently projected in the "Concerto in A Major."

The middle portion of the program, largely of quiet delicate excerpts, was unfortunately marred by the unsatisfactory placing of some of the pipes. While this, it is hoped, will be overcome in time, its effect last night was to lend a muffled monotony to what should have been works of contrasting color. The Prelude, by Gliere, was, however, intensely moving with a rich combination effect. The second of the two improvisations of Karg-Elert was also brilliantly contrasted with the Yon Toccatina which followed it, a work in which only the flute stop and a light 16-foot pedal are employed.

Climaxing the evening were the four Bach excerpts at the close. The A Minor fugue, "By Adam's Fall Debased" and "Oh, Lord, Have Mercy on Me" preceded the great "Prelude and Fugue in B Minor."

For the visiting organist each new console is a fresh problem. Dr. Noble demonstrated his great skill by the ease with which he adapted himself to the righly toned Cathedral organ.

County-Owned System Sought in Petition of 28 Lawyers

Twenty-eight of the 38 members of the Arlington County Bar Association have petitioned for establishment of a county-owned electric power system, it was learned yesterday.

The bar members have signed a communication to Robert E. Plymale, chairman of the public utilities commission of the Arlington County Civic Federation, in which they indorse the project as a means of lowering power rates and taxes, and providing "other public benefits."

The signers include George P. Grove, association president; Frank L. Ball, past president and former State Senator; Clarence R. Ahalt, past president, and John McCarthy, secretary.

Two of the signers, John Locke Green and Emery N. Hosmer, originated the movement for a county-owned power utility two years ago before the Arlington County board, which subsequently ordered a survey of existing facilities.

Other signers are Amos Crounse, Linus A. Verzi, W. E. Van Deusen, Franklin V. Anderson, Albert M. Jones, Robert E. Ryland, Bryan Gordon, Allen C. Adams, Boardman Munson, Edgar Pumphrey, George D. Fischer, Walter U. Varney, Harry A. Sockey, William C. Gloth, William C. Gloth, jr., James H. Simmonds, John G. Turnbull, Harry W. Porter, Sophronia Lasica, Waller B. Smith and Percy A. Crittenden.

The letter to Plymale follows:

"We, the undersigned attorneys residing and practicing in Arlington County, having informed ourselves in the premises, and believing that the ownership and operation by Arlington County of the light and power system contemplated by the county board, under the report of Wiley & Wilson, consulting engineers, will enable the county board to reduce taxes, lower electric rates, and provide other public benefits, do hereby approve, recommend, and petition the establishment of such a county-owned system.

"We further desire to commend the work of the Civic Federation in general, and of the public-utilities committee of the federation in particular, for the unyielding work performed in this connection, for and in behalf of the citizens of Arlington County."

Lutherans Urged To Face Problems With Common Aim

A plea for the Lutheran Church to "unite for a common aim in facing the problems of today," was voiced last night at Luther Place Memorial Church by Dr. Hans Lilje, of Berlin, in America to arrange for the 1940 world Lutheran convention in Philadelphia. He was introduced by Miss Amelia Kemp, of the Lutheran Board of Education.

"There is no doubt that the Lutheran Church does have the answer to the problems of our day," the speaker told members of the Young People's Fellowship Society, and urged them to view the coming convention not "just in terms of a world organization, but as an attempt on the part of world Lutherans to give its 'answer' convincingly."

Dr. Lilje, who addressed a Lutheran ministerial meeting yesterday morning at Reformation Lutheran Church, was named general secretary of the Lutheran World Convention at the world gathering of that organization at Paris in 1935. Long prominent in German church affairs, he has served as youth pastor of the Hanoverian Church, student pastor of the Technical High School at Hanover and general secretary of the German Christian Student's World Union.

By the Associated Press.

Labor leaders who hope to swing 1,300,000 textile workers into A. F. L. unions confererd yesterday on an organization campaign which may have an important effect on the A. F. L.-C. I. O. split.

Several of the conferees are former organizers for the C. I. O.'s United Textile Workers organizing committee. One of them, Joseph Sylvia, of Providence, R. I., said after talking with A. F. L. leaders:

"We are making progress toward our objective of bringing the U. T. W. into the A. F. L."

About 40 former local unions of the U. T. W., its officials estimated, have affiliated with the A. F. L. in the last 18 months.

Weinberg to Run For U. S. Senate

Frederick, Md., Dec. 6 (AP).—Leo Weinberg, unsuccessful Republican nominee for attorney general, announced tonight his candidacy for the seat of United States Senator Radcliffe in 1940.

He said the announcement was being made two years in advance "before Gov. Nice undertakes to pre-empt the field." The Governor, he asserted, has an "ambition to be nominated for the United States Senate."

Babson 'Bullish' On '39 but Fears Long-Term Trend

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Roger W. Babson, business analyst, declared tonight he was "bullish on 1939," but hastily added he was fearful of the long-term trend in world economy in an address before the Lord's Day Alliance, at Bedford Park Presbyterian Church, in Brooklyn.

"I, however, am fearful of the present trend line," he said. "This may slacken its pace for some time. In fact, it will not go up again until this Nation and the world is awakened by a spiritual revival."

He listed as reasons for the downward trend of the business cycle: A switch from permanent improvements to consumer goods; young people's desire for jazz instead of babies; the change from farm-manufactured motive power to engines; the use of fuel oil instead of coal, which has deprived 1,000,000 men of jobs; labor union pressure, which forces installation of labor-saving machines and creates unemployment, and the waste of character from vice, frivolity and neglect of Sunday observance.

"I feel that the Lord's Day Alliance is the one organization in America most intimately wrapped up in the question of the conservation of time. Shall it be conserved, or shall it be wasted? How this question is to be answered will, in my mind, determine the real trend of the United States of America."

Bolivian Finds European Culture 'At End of Rope'

A Bolivian educator of part-Indian blood yesterday urged the building up of a strictly American culture as he asserted that the Americans pay too much attention to European affairs and not enough to American.

"Europe is at the end of her rope," declared Dr. Ernesto Vaca-Guzman, chief of the division of statistics and information in the Bolivian ministry of education. "It is the task of the American continent to carry on with new culture standards and ideals."

Vaca-Guzman is in Washington with three of his countrymen, Max A. Bairon, inspector-general of Indian education; Leonidas Calvimontes Carreno, former secretary of the division of Indian education, and Carlos Salazar-Mostajo, a teacher in the most important Indian school in Bolivia.

The visitors, who have just completed a year's study of Indian education in Mexico, intend to investigate American educational methods in the schools of Washington and rural Maryland and Virginia.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for generations recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a good dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and may be taken frequently by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles due to common colds hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund your money. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is It Wise for Third Person to Attempt Peacemaker's Role When Long-Time Friends Quarrel?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For several years I have been friends with a girl who lives several hundred miles from here, and although we have spent less than a month of our lives together, I consider her my dearest friend. Last year she got married. Shortly afterward she introduced me, through the mail, to her husband's best friend. He and I have corresponded ever since, and a fine friendship has developed.

About eight months ago, he was taken ill and had to go to an out-of-town hospital to recuperate. He is still there, but once a month he gets a pass into town. Of course, he is not permitted much excitement, and his greatest delight on going into town is to see his old friends—especially this couple. The last time he went into town, he was unable—due to a series of misunderstandings—to see them. Furthermore, he is convinced that they treated him inconsiderately, to say the least. However, the girl has given me her version of the incident, and she is just as annoyed about the matter as he is.

Neither knows that the other has written me about it. I know that both can't be entirely right, and therefore assume that both are wrong to a certain degree. The whole thing is so petty that it seems a pity that a friendship which has existed for so long should be broken up, especially at a time when the boy needs friends more than ever.

Maybe the thing for me to do is to skip the whole matter. Certainly I can't say "The other party said so-and-so, and so-and-so, and you must be wrong about this," to either of them. Yet I hate to see the friendship broken. If I were either party, I know that I would be grateful if a third party stepped in and straightened things out. But I don't want to do it if it will endanger my friendship with either, and at the same time serve no good. Please tell me how you would handle this situation. Or would you keep out of it? Sincerely, P. G.

The Generous Attitude

DEAR P. G.: Since you are an equally good friend of each party to this unfortunate misunderstanding, and since each has confided his version of the episode to you, I am convinced that you would be altogether justified in trying to heal the breach. In fact, I think it would be rather cowardly to evade the responsibility as a mere matter of social expediency.

However, it is my surmise that the convalescent young man is probably rather more to blame for the strained relations than he realizes. Cut off by hospitalization from normal social activities for the most part, he probably has come to place rather exaggeratedly sentimental emphasis upon the ties of friendship which connect him with the outside world; and he probably expects those friends to look forward with as much eagerness as he does to their infrequent reunions. And while they are no doubt glad to see him, such occasions probably don't loom as large in their eyes as in his.

It may ave been, indeed, that it simply wasn't convenient for this couple to see him on his latest visit into town; that they had other plans, or chose to revise certain plans at the last moment, for reasons best known to themselves, and that the young wife—inspired by a desire to be infinitely tactful, and with the best intentions in the world—offered some polite but transparent excuse for breaking an engagement with him, or failing to keep a habit-born sort of standing engagement.

And it may be that he reacted with almost neurotic resentment to a gesture which meant no offense, but which he construed as a curt rebuff or the cut direct. Chronic or long-time invalids are apt to fall into a mental state of hypersensitivity to social attention or the lack of it, you know. Having become the center of attention in the small world of sick room or hospital, they rather expect—until forced by harsh reality into a healthier attitude—to continue to be the center of attention in the world outside.

I think you might call this (at least) plausible explanation of the mutual misunderstanding to the attention of both parties to the quarrel, asking the young couple, on the one hand, to be especially lenient with the young man in view of his tedious social isolation; and urging the young man, on the other hand, to be on guard against neurasthenic tendencies which play havoc with friendships and turn dispositions sour. In offering such an explanation, however, be careful not to take the position that the young man is a sorehead; or that he is behaving like one. Such a statement or implication might immediately be conveyed to him, distorted out of all proportion to its peace-making intent.

Rather, in diplomatic and persuasive language, urge upon each side the wisdom of taking a larger view of the proposition than has been taken; of seeing how foolish it would be to scrap a long and valued friendship because of a trifling misunderstanding; of being the first to drop the quarrel and go all the way, if necessary, to heal the breach. If each side can be persuaded to this attitude, the difference will dissolve into thin air, and you will have performed an inestimable service to all.

Incidentally, you might send the young man a copy of Donald Laird's book, "Why We Don't Like People," which is, in essence, an illuminating and detailed discussion of the reasons why people don't like us. It shows, among other things, the folly of carrying chips on one's shoulder; the punitive cost of hypersensitivity, and the wisdom and social profit of being slow to take offense and first to make amends. America's Men Short on Romance, The Women Lament

The men of America are good, sound men, but pretty short on romance. This is the verdict of the women of America. It is recorded in a Nationwide survey on "What Do The Women of America Think About Men?" made by the Ladies' Home Journal.

Through the medium of the Journal's poll the women present this indictment of their men:

They are not romantic enough.

They are more interested in such comparatively dull things as business and sports than in women.

They are set-ups for flattery.

They can't be trusted to make important decisions in the home.

They underestimate their wives' abilities.

They have many things wrong with their appearance, but their most common flaw is whiskers—needing a shave.

Local Color In Kerchief Scene

The age old handkerchief giving season is in full swing. The first cold days of the Christmas month bring an influx in the kerchief giving art. Here's one handkerchief trick that looks like magicians' technique for the clean sharp lines of the etcher's pen are clearly printed on the sheer pastel linen handkerchief being flaunted, about. For gift givers who seek the unusual in handerkerchiefs, the local scenes obtainable on these kerchiefs will tempt you to add a few to your own supply. The Washington Monument may be had, or the Empire State Building or other towering New York scenes for those who grow nostalgic for Manhattan's skline—all for a few stray nickels and dimes

Your Figure

Bust Contour Corrective Hint Is Offered

Sagging Not Normal, Medical Expert Advised Women

By Ida Jean Kain.

IS IT normal for the bust to sag as a woman grows older? Can the tendency to sagging be counteracted? And the too heavy bust . . . can it be brought into proportion with the rest of the figure? Women today are avid for the answers to these and many other questions, for the bust, being composed of glands rather than muscles, is the most mysterious part of the figure—and fashion demands that it be high and firm.

Since the subject is of such vital interest for women generally, I went directly to Dr. Bess Mensendieck, who is probably the world's foremost authority on the musculature of the feminine figure. Dr. Mensendieck's intensive scientific training and her years of experience in helping women to solve their figure problems make her advice invaluable.

Easily Normalized

It is most encouraging to learn that sagging of the bust contour is not normal, that the tendency can be prevented and even overcome, and that this portion of the figure—whether too large or too small—can be normalized.

Contour and position of the bust, Dr. Mensendieck tells us, depend principally on four things: Muscle tone, skin tone, posture and weight. These four factors, however, cannot be isolated and Dr. Mensendieck stresses the necessity of first improving the body as a whole, then taking up the specific problems.

Dr. Mensendieck explains that the fatty gland sits on the pectoral muscle like a mushroom and that when the pectoral muscle becomes flabby through lack of tone, then the weight of the gland drags the contour down. Therefore, good muscle tone not only of the pectorals, but of the entire musculature is of the utmost importance.

The pectoral muscles are very thick and when kept in good tone are largely responsible for holding the bust to lovely position. The muscles are weakened through lack of exercise, and frequently through poor posture. Rounding the shoulders in sedentary work is particularly bad for the pectorals.

Good Skin Tone

It is important that the skin be kept in good tone. Firm skin helps to maintain a high, firm contour, and the tendency to sagging is perceptibly increased when the skin has been overdistanced. Dr. Mensendieck advises that a woman should never wait longer than six weeks after confinement to exercise to restore tone to the skin and muscles in this area.

Improvement of the figure as a whole should be your first aim in improving the bust, and weight and vitality may be your starting point. If the weight is above normal, you must diet to reduce, but to safeguard your vitality your diet must provide the protective foods in adequate amounts. And if this measurement is disproportionately large, you must add to general exercise the specific exercises that will work the muscles on which this fat is centered.

For the underdeveloped bust, begin with a program to build up the entire body, adding to weight and vitality through correct eating habits, and stimulating muscle and skin tone through exercise. If underweight, you should follow a balanced menu supplemented by a quart of milk daily.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 6.

THE CANARIES are making their debuts so rapidly here just now that our ears are bent completely out of shape. Everyone who can sing a lick wants to unloose her best notes in New York, believing that from this dot on the map stretch those radio contracts, those Hollywood careers and those pictures in the papers. Bless their trusting little tonsils!

ALICE HUGHES

The Metropolitan Opera, of course, has its annual list of newcomers to hurl at the Diamond Horseshoe, which is fast asleep, as usual. Of the fresh Met larks, so far unveiled, probably the most interesting and promising is a tenor singer named Jussi Bjoerling and you pronounce it, please. He is a slim and handsome tenor of the new streamlined style, and when he made his Met bow in "Boheme" the ladies all screamed for joy after his first solo and stopped the show, almost. So it look as though Mr. Whoosis, or "Toots," is in.

Then the Met went stark crazy and presented "La Traviata" with three real American singers in the leads. They weren't newcomers, but what a novelty to see so many home-grown folk on that great foreign stage. The three were blonde Helen Jepson and Messrs. Richard Crooks and Lawrence Tibbett. All did well.

The deboo I really hung back for was that of Alice Marble, the tennis champ, in the Sert Room of the Waldorf. I wanted to see if anyone who looked so lovely on the court in short shorts could sing pretty in a cafe. The answer is yes, she could. "I sing love songs and ballads," says the cute Californian. "No torch songs, or swing." And she sings them right well, too. In the daytime, she practices indoors for next season's tennis; at night she captivates the swells at the Waldorf. Nice work. Alice old kid—and you can get it!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Of all the people I've been tired of, I guess the leader has been this Miss Valerie Brooke, daughter of the Rajah of Sarawak, way out thar in Borneo. She's the blonde bon-bon the reporters have insisted on miscalling "Princess Baba" though she's no more a princess than you and I are. I hope I'm not too kitty, but I did get a giggle when I heard she'd been cast as a hoochee-koochee dancer in her first Hollywood movie, and that its star, the great tuber-nosed W. C. Fields, had never heard of her, or pretended so. "What's her name," he asked a reporter, "Princess Blah-blah?" Let Bill have the last word, for no one can top it.

We hear in New York that Frau Dollfuss, widow of the murdered Austrian chancellor, is coming here to live. Incidentally, New York is filled with refugess from Central European countries. It is easy to tell the women who have come here for safety of body and security of spirit. Their shoes are very bad and they wear funny little flat hats. But their voices are gentle and calm—and I hope they have found the comfort and peace they have craved.

Speaking of visitors from overseas, I predict a lot of gear-shifting when it comes to timing the projected visits of the King and Queen of England and the former king (what was the name again?) and his duchess. That is a very delicate situation, since the dear old Empire again needs all its pals.

How Sound Gets Into Ear; Common Troubles Described

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Sound gets to the inner organ of the ear in a rather complicated way. It is caught by the external organ, which is designed to concentrate sound waves into the canal, which we can all see. What we cannot see behind that canal is an eardrum, which is much like and was the model for the receiver of a telephone. Attached to the inside of this delicate member, the eardrum, are three little bones, lying in a chamber which is known as the middle ear.

The last of these little bones finally hits the real organ of hearing, which is built like a snail and is therefore called the cochlea. From the cochlea there goes a nerve to the part of the brain which receives these sensations.

What May Happen

It can be seen that a great many unfortunate things can happen to the ear. The external canal can be stopped up with wax; the eardrum can become ossified; pus can destroy the middle ear, and various things can destroy the cochlea and the nerve. But with these we are not concerned today.

The curious thing is that the vibrations of air can be translated into the sensation of hearing, which means the sensation of thought. The most marvelous part of the ear is the cochlea and the nerve cells which line it. These are apparently arranged as organ pipes are arranged, or at least they respond to a scale as organ pipes create a scale.

There are three qualities of sound—loudness, pitch and timbre. Loudness varies with the amplitude of vibration of a sound wave; pitch with the frequency of vibration, and timbre with the pattern of the wave.

The middle ear, with the drum membrane, probably is responsible for analyzing the differences in intensity. The inner ear, with all the little nerve endings, is responsible for analyzing the differences in pitch.

Theories Disagree

The theories which account for pitch are not in agreement. There are, however, two which are generally held. One assumes that all of the nerve endings of the inner ear vibrate as a whole periodically, like the transmitting and receiving discs of a telephone. The second assumes that certain structures or parts vibrate separately, periodically, as the various strings of a piano vibrate.

The range of the human ear is fairly small. It ranges from 16 to 20,000 variations per second. Below 16 we hear puffs of air as from a wind instrument or individual beats from a string. Other animals can hear sounds, far above and far below this range. In the middle range of 100 to 1,000 we hear best and can distinguish differences in pitch of one vibration per second. It is in this range that all important muscial compositions are composed.

It has been calculated that there are 11,000 different pitches which the ear can detect and, therefore, on the inside cochlea there are 11,000 different nerve endings.

SHE—Now shut your eyes darling while I give you something. . . . There! Now open them!

HE—Why . . . why . . . whose picture is this?

SHE—Do you mean to say you don't know who that is?

HE—Why . . . why . . . well now wait a minute . . . why . . . it's ot you, is it?

SHE—Now don't tell me you didn't know me!

HE—Well . . . er . . . you see right at first—

SHE—You don't mean to say that picture doesn't look like me!

HE—Oh no . . . I'd know it was you all right. It . . . it really looks a lot like you.

SHE—Well after all I don't want a picture to look too much like me. I want it to flatter me.

HE—Oh, it flatters you all right.

SHE—WHAT!

HE—I think it flatters you a lot.

SHE—Of ALL things! Then you really think that picture's better looking than I am?

HE—Oh yes a lot . . . say what's the matter?

SHE—You make me sick!

HE—Why . . . why I thought you said you wanted the picture to flatter you.

SHE—Well I didn't want YOU to think that it flattered me.

HE—Well now . . . now . . . I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. After all, you didn't want me to lie to you did you?

SHE—Oh no . . . I suppose not. Say tell me one thing. If you saw this picture somewhere and didn't know it was me . . . well just what would you think of that woman?

HE—Well, I'd think there was a woman with a lot of character in her face.

SHE—You don't mean to tell me I look like a strong character!

HE—Say, what have I done now? I thought you wanted to have character.

SHE—Of course! But not to LOOK it!

HE—Well I'm sorry I hurt your feelings, but you didn't want me to lie to you, did you?

SHE—Oh no . . . I suppose not. It's just that I hate to be told I'm so ugly—

HE—I didn't say you were ugly.

SHE—You just the same as said it. You said I was an opinionated, strong-jawed, reformer type—

HE—If that isn't just like a woman to twist everything—

SHE—No, that's just what you meant. Anyway I knew those pictures weren't as good as those other pictures I had taken five years ago—say, wait a minute! . . . I just want you to see the two together . . . Now then, which is the better?

HE—Well, of course, you look older in these last pictures—

SHE—WHAT?

HE—Say, wnat have I done now?

SHE—You mean to tell me I show more age in these last pictures?

HE—Well after all you ARE 5 years older.

SHE—But I don't LOOK it . . . Of all things! . . . You . . . you make me sick!

HE—Say, are you crying?

SHE—No, I'm not crying.

HE—Well what's the matter?

SHE—Well, first you tell me I'm ugly and that I look like a lady policeman and now you say I'm an old woman—

HE—There you go again! Twisting everything I say.

SHE—Well it's just what you meant. I don't see why you don't divorce me if I'm so awful—

HE—Now don't be silly. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. You didn't want me to lie to you, did you?

SHE—YES, I wanted you to lie to me!

HE—WHAT!

SHE—Why shouldn't you lie to me. I lie to you.

HE—You lie to me!

SHE—Yes I lie to you when I tell you you don't look a day over 39 . . . I lie to you when I say your stomach doesn't show under your coat . . . I lie to you when I tell you the hair's coming in on your bald spot.

HE—SAY! You mean the hair's not REALLY coming in on my bald spot?

SHE—We-l-l—

HE—No, I want the truth. If you're lying to me I want to know it.

SHE—Well the truth is I—I have been lying to you about your age . . . and your stomach—

HE—What about the bald spot?

SHE—We-l-l I—I don't know. Just let me look again.

HE—Now don't lie to me. Is it any balder back there?

SHE—No it's not. And Honey, I really and truly believe I see a lot of little new hairs—

HE—You expect me to believe that?

SHE—Really it's the truth. I was just mad when I said what I did awhile ago . . . about the bald spot. There really ARE some new hairs—

HE—Well I'm sorry about the picture, but after all you wouldn't have wanted me to lie to you would you?

Only 5 of 125 Admit They Have Never Been Kissed

Sweet sixteen and never been kissed? There is little, if any, truth in this well-worn phrase.

An iconoclastic investigator interviewed 125 16-year-old actresses engaged to support Bonita Granville.

He asked bluntly, "Have you ever been kissed?" There was a hurried consultation with mothers, agents and chaperons. Only five had never been kissed

Only eight out of the 125 drank. Eighty-five stayed up after midnight, but only 75 were out unchaperoned. One hundred and twenty-five out of 125 used lipstick and powder.

Capital Society Greets Polish Artist at Party

Mme. Wankowicz Fetes Mme. de Romer; Paintings Displayed

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

With a series of unusual paintings decorating the walls, the attractive home of the Polish Counselor and Mme. Witold Wankowicz yesterday afternoon at tea time took on some of the aspects of a picture gallery. The occasion was one in a series of "at homes" that Mme. Wankowicz has planned in compliment to her house guest, Mme. Anna de Romer, Polish artist, who recently arrived in Washington for an extended visit.

Before Mme. de Romer leaves the Capital, she hopes to have a fullfledged exhibition; and ever since she hit town a few days ago, she has been busy working toward that end. Yesterday, however, she put aside her brush and water colors for several hours to meet and mingle with a number of Washington residents who saw some of her pictures and were clamoring to see more.

House Furnished Polish Style

One of the Capital's most gracious hostesses, Mme. Wankowicz, who has done a bit of painting herself, received informally in a drawing room that is a small section of Poland transposed to Washington. A silver vase filled with red carnations on a small table drawn near a scarlet-covered low couch added an additional dash of color to the warmly beautiful setting. Over against a wall already decorated with Polish tapestry was a huge crystal vase bearing a pink gladioli softly shaded in the flickering gleam of tall yellow tapers in gold candelabra.

Both the drawing room and the spacious dining room, into which it opens, are furnished in handmade tables and chairs, designed by the master of the house and made from ash wood to his order. The long tea table, flanked Polish-fashion, by two long benches, was laden with delicious tidbits and decorated with low bowls of fruit and orange tapers stemming from twin silver candelabra.

In contrast to their colorful surroundings, both the hostess and the guest of honor wore severely simple black frocks. Mme. Wankowicz's was set off with a strand of pearls and three white blossoms on her shoulder. Mme. de Romer had chosen a dress with a high neckline trimmed with matching buttons that contrasted nicely with her diamond eardrops.

Subjects Show Wide Variety

But attention soon shifted from the hostess and Mme. de Romer to the latter's paintings that portray scenes and people of her native land. Equally adept at both landscapes and portraits, the artist had in her display yesterday a variety of subjects, ranging from a snow scene to a trio of heads, representing three generations.

Since Mr. Wankowicz is now abroad, several members of the Polish Embassy staff were on hand yesterday afternoon to assist Mme. Wankowicz. The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, was among the early arrivals and stayed during most of the party. Rafal Lepkowski, Second Secretary of the Embassy, took guest after guest on the rounds to see the pictures; Michal Budny, attache, was a reception committee all his own; while the Chancellor of the Embassy, Stephen Poradzewski, was here, there, and everywhere looking after guests, and Mme. Poradzewski was assisting at the tea table.

Mrs. Morgenthau Among Guests

In the company were Mrs. William R. Castle, arriving early and lingering long; Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in a trim black frock and hat and a mink coat; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., seen chatting with Mme. Wankowicz's daughters, Yolande and Marie, who were also very important additions to the party; Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, who came in with a trio that included Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Miss Irene Boyle and Countess de Gramont.

One of the snappiest costumes there was worn by Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., who arrived with her father-in-law, George T. Summerlin, of the State Department. Her trim gray suit, with a small black hat and silver fox neckpiece, was accented with a bouquet of ladyslipper orchids on one shoulder. Mrs. Adolph C. Miller was there, also Mrs. Victor Mallett, Signora Valerie Cosmelli and Jan Henry de Rosen.

Mrs. Dunbar Challenges Takoma Park Women To 'Help Solve Many Problems Before Us'

Federation President Heard by Record Crowd in Fire Hall

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Challenging club women to "step boldly down into the stream of life and help solve the many unsolved problems before us," Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday afternoon addressed the Takoma Park Club at its December luncheon.

Taking as her subject the federation's three-year theme, "Adjusting Democracy for Human Welfare," Mrs. Dunbar urged the women to "think in terms of human welfare, of peace and of Christian citizenship; to recognize the potential strength and power of the united 14,452 clubs in the General Federation and to enlist the active support of every member in every worthy cause.

"Never build a philosophy to take the place of religion and of God," she advised. "Stay in the field of peace, but don't take freedom and liberty for granted. Wherever there is want, a child in need, poor health wherever we feel insecurity, the lack of beauty or other subversive influences, the clubs of America have work to do."

The nine departments of the federation, she said, are rooted in these problems and, reviewing the organization's 50 years of achievement, the clubs should have renewed courage and be prepared to assume greater responsibility.

Last night Mrs. Dunbar left for Charlotte, N. C., where she will speak before the Charlotte Woman's Club at a luncheon meeting today, and from there go to Rockhill, S. C., just across the State line, this afternoon. She will return to Washington tonight.

Biddle, former president of the Takoma Park club and also past president of the District of Columbia Federation; Mrs. Dunbar and Mrs. Walter P. Harman, Takoma Park president

Record Number Attends Meeting

Mrs. Dunbar's presence was responsible for a record attendance at the luncheon which was held in the fire hall. There were more than 200 members and guests present. Mrs. Walter P. Harman, president of the club, opened the program and Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt introduced Mrs. Dunbar.

The decorations, which were in charge of Mrs. Edward Widdifield, heralded the approach of Christmas. Red candles burned in small logs on the tables and Christmas trees and greens decorated the room. Carols were sung by members of the club choral, who wore capes with red hoods and entered, dragging Yule logs which they threw in the fireplace to burn as they sang. They were directed by Mrs. Edmund Green with Waldo Schmitt as accompanist.

The club is preparing for its usual Christmas philanthropic work, carried on chiefly through the Health and Welfare Center, which it helps support. The members give money and clothing and make garments for families which need assistance. Mrs. John A. Quinn is chairman of the welfare group and Mrs. George E. Robertson president of the center.

Other Club Presidents Guests of Honor

Special guests at yesterday's luncheon, in addition to Mrs. Dunbar, were: Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan, president of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. James A. Robertson, a past president of the Takoma Park Club, who is now a resident of Annapolis and president of the Fourth District; Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, president of the Petworth Club; Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, president of Marietta Park; Mrs. M. Fullerton, president of the Annapolis-Arundel Club, and Mrs. Harold Heffner, president of the Junior Women's Club of Takoma Park.

Mr. and Mrs Duncan Phillips are patrons for the dance concert which Miss Evelyn Davis and Jose Limon are giving at the Roosevelt High School auditorium this evening at 8:30 o'clock as the second in the series of winter programs presented by the Washington Dance Association, whose membership includes prominent artists, educators and musicians.

Others on the list of patrons include the assistant director of the Phillips Gallery and Mrs. C. Law Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lahey, Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education; Mrs. Jessie Moon Holton, Bray Hammond, Mr. and Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Theodore Dominick, Dr. L. A. H. Peters, agricultural attache of the Netherlands Legation; Miss Helen Davis and Mrs George Garner.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe has written the music for one of Miss Davis' solo numbers, "Andante Douloureux," and Everett Stevens, brilliant, young composer, whose concerto for piano and orchestra was recently played by the National Symphony Orchestra, composed special music for "Pseudo Intellectualist," another number to be presented by Miss Davis.

Miss Schrottky Describes Girl Scout Drama Projects

You don't have to act to go in for drama as a hobby, Girl Scout leaders were told last night by Miss Oleda Schrottky, of the staff of the national organization. Miss Schrottky, who is director of drama for the Girl Scouts of America, addressed a meeting of the Girl Scouts Leaders' Association in Pierce Hall, attended by leaders and consultants of the nearly 150 local troops. Today she will speak before a luncheon at the Y. W. C. A., to which leaders of other civic groups have been invited.

She explanied how drama could be used to include all members of a troop, arousing interest in a variety of hobbies—its purpose always the development of the individual rather than of the project itself.

Her talk was punctuated with humorous illustrations which kept her audience entertained while she brought home practical points about this branch of Girl Scouting.

"Girls who have neither ability nor inclination to act, can find plenty to do in other parts of the production," she said. "They can learn to do the lighting, build and paint the stage sets, make costumes, handle the publicity and judge and appreciate a new play."

It is much better to begin with good literature, dramatizing classics which are easily adapted to juvenile presentation, than to try creative writing, Miss Schrottky advised. "King of the Golden River," "Cinderella," and some of the ancient Chinese plays are the types which may be used, she said. Attempting to produce original ones will be "like always baking a poor cake and never a good one," she said.

She gave three rules for all plays: "First, an interesting plot; second, lines worth memorizing, and third, a good idea."

Miss Schrottky was introduced by Mrs. W. F. Crosby, Girl Scout commissioner for the District. Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the national organization, will head the list of guests at today's luncheon.

THE WOMAN'S COUNCIL of the Washington Federation of Churches today opens its annual series of broadcasts in the interest of its Christmas alley programs. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, will present the first program at 2 o'clock this afternoon over Station WJSV. The next, on Saturday, from 9:30 to 9:45, will be in charge of Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chairman of the juvenile court department of the council; the third, on Tuesday, from 5:45 to 6 p. m., in charge of Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall, chairman of the alley project, and the fourth, Friday of next week, from 2:15 to 2:30, under the direction of Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the council, who was responsible for the idea of taking Christmas to the alleys two years ago.

Denominational representatives who will co-operate in the first two broadcasts are Mrs. F. J. Hobbs, of the Disciples; Mrs. Harold Stabler, of Friends, and Mrs. John L. Parks, of Presbyterian U. S., for the first. Mrs. Dudley Newcomb Carpenter, Episcopal; Mrs. Wallace N. Streeter, Methodist; Mrs. Hans Sorenson, of the Community Church, and Mrs. Ruth Stetson, of the United Brethren, the second. The others will be announced later, as will the dates of the subsequent broadcasts.

MRS. ROOSEVELT, who participated in the alley programs two years ago, will do so again this year, speaking at Snow's court, on Twenty-fifth street, between I and K streets northwest Christmas Eve. The program will be in charge of Calvary Baptist Church.

The Post and RKO Keith's Theater have co-operated in providing toys for the children this Christmas as before and, in addition to the toys there will be food and other practical gifts to provide Christmas in the homes of the alley dwellers.

MRS. JEAN BENNETT, superintendent of the Central Union Mission and founder of the Children's Emergency Home of the mission, is slated to be the next president of the Soroptimist Club, succeeding Mrs. Agnes Newman. Her name heads the ballot which will be voted on at next week's meeting and her sister club members say she will be elected without opposition. She is a former regional director of the Soroptimists and past president of the Women's City Club and now chairman of its business and professional women's section.

The Soroptimists have their weekly luncheon today at the Willard Hotel. Dr. Rosalind Bain will present as speaker, Mrs. Robert L. Parsons, assistant director of the Corcoran Gallery, who will give an illustrated talk on pictures there.

LAURA BERRIEN, president of the National Association of Women Lawyers, has gone to Boston, where she will participate in a debate on Equal Rights, sponsored by the Massachusetts Association of University Women and later will attend a regional conference of the association which she heads. She is also prominently identified with the National Woman's Party.

Cubs Get Leiber, Mancuso, Bartell in Trade

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A Grid Row!

It is none of our business, but perhaps you'd like to know that a fair-sized row is being staged between New York and Chicago sports editors, with the National Football League in the middle and not doing so well.

POVICH.

The proleague is in the middle because, with publicity as its life blood, it can ill-afford to take sides in the newspaper row and thus allenate support. However, there has been some side-taking. The league has walked out on the New York Herald Tribune and apparently sold out to the Chicago Tribune.

The alleged sell-out was brought to light when it became known that the league had voted to slap a $5,000 fine on any league team which participated in any preseason game involving players who did not have the consent of the Chicago Tribune to compete.

And now Mr. Stanley Woodward, sports editor of the Herald Trib, is screaming. The new league rule is aimed at his paper's charity football promotions, he shouts. And he has little doubt that the rule was inspired by the Chicago Trib, which is seeking to protect its own charity game from big-time competition.

Look at the Record

Perhaps we'd better reconstruct the situation briefly. Five years ago, Arch Ward, the Chicago Trib's promotion-minded sports editor, launched the charity games between his paper's All-American squad and the professional champion team. Two years later, the New York Herald Trib undertook a football promotion for its Fresh Air Fund, pitting the New York Giants against a team of Eastern All-Stars in a preseason game.

It was inevitable that the two games should clash as far as college playing talent is concerned. Ward discovered that Eastern players he wanted for his All-Star squad were under contract to play in the Herald Tribune game. Obviously, the Chicago game would not be representative of an All-America squad if certain Eastern players were not present. Because of the fact that the games were scheduled only a week apart, players could hardly compete in both games.

And this new league rule forbidding pro teams to compete against college players who do not have the consent of the Chicago Tribune to participate, is an attempt to stifle his own game, claims Woodward. But they won't get away with it, Woodward infers. On his side are the New York Giants who are under contract to play in the Herald Trib game despite the $5,000 fine they face.

The reason for the league's action in aligning itself with Sports Editor Ward is obvious enough. Mr. Ward was the first to invite the pro champions to compete. And Mr. Ward pays them well out of the vast profits of his All-Star game. In fact, the pro champion team is guaranteed $25,000 as its end of the Chicago charity game.

That $25,000 is a powerful attraction. In fact the guarantee for the annual Chicago affair is the chief prize of the National Football League pennant race. It represents more money than the owner of the league champions can hope to receive as his share of the play-off game for the title.

For example, when the Green Bay Packers and the New York Giants meet at the Polo Grounds on Sunday in the league play-off, each club owner will receive only 15 per cent of the net gate after traveling expenses, rent for the park and incidentals are deducted. Owners of the Polo Grounds, who take 15 per cent of the gross, will profit far more from the game than either club owner.

Won't Pay Fine

So the $25,000 that is ready at Chicago for the league champion is heavier cash than the club owner can expect from any other game of the year. Thus the National League is willing to risk the enmity of the potent New York Herald Tribune. And thus it is no surprise to read the following by Sports Editor Stanley Woodward, who would have it known that Chicago is merely a whistle-stop compared to New York:

"The National Football League recently decided to become exclusively associated with those prairies which lie beyond the Alleghenies. It concluded, contrary to available statistics, that Chicago is the Nation's Metropolis and that it will henceforth devote itself exclusively to supporting an All-Star game which is played in that city and opposing all other enterprises of a similar nature . . .

"Fortunately, the National League, which is solvent chiefly because of contributions of the New York Giants, does not yet have the power to over-ride legal contracts and herd college boys around as if they were beef cattle and act as adjudicator in matters which are none of its business.

"No one, not even the least intelligent will take the new league rule seriously . . . every once in a while anybody is apt to run off on a tangent and become temporarily psycopathic . . .

"We also hasten to assure you that we shall not let the New York Giants pay the fine, if the league has the consummate nerve to assess it. Fortunately in view of prospective receipts of the 1939 All-Star game, it is a pittance. It will remove fresh air from the lungs of about 400 children."

Mr. Woodward adds that the Washington, Philadelphia, Detroit, Green Bay and Chicago Cardinal teams voted in favor of the resolutions and that the New York, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh and Cleveland teams walked out of the meeting, "refusing to dignify any such flapdoodle with even a negative vote."

The only thing Mr. Woodward forgot to say was that there can be no copyright on charity.

Cliff Battles Slated for Rams' Berth

Former Redskin Is To Confer With Cleveland Club Chiefs This Week

By Shirley Povich.

Cliff Battles, backfield hero of the Redskins for six seasons, will return to professional football next season as head coach of the Cleveland Rams. That is the report current in national football circles and its truth has been intimated by Battles himself.

BATTLES

Battles is seriously considering severing his relations with the Columbia University coaching staff and accepting the Cleveland position, he told a representative of The Washington Post.

"The Cleveland people have asked me to confer with them this week," said Battles. "They have not as yet offered me the job, but I believe that is their purpose. I would accept it."

Thus it is indicated that the Cleveland ownership is prepared to dismiss Art Lewis, who assumed the head coaching job during the past season after Hugo Bezdek was discharged following the Rams' 37-13 defeat by the Redskins in their third game of the year.

Battles as head coach of the Cleveland club would be a "natural," according to the belief of the Rams' owners. A product of Doylestown, Ohio, Battles during his sensational college career at West Virginia Wesleyan and his stardom in the pro league, has been the proud boast of Ohio. A year ago he married a girl of a prominent Cleveland family.

Technically Battles is still the property of the Redskins, despite his retirement from the pro league at the end of last season, but Owner George Marshall of the Washington club declared that the Redskins would be willing to waive their claim to him.

"I would not stand in Battles' way if he were offered the Cleveland coaching job," said Marshall. "But, of course, he could not return to the league as a player unless he joined the Redskins. I believe that Battles would be a successful coach in our league."

A renewal of his contract with Columbia University as assistant to Head Coach Lou Little awaits Battles if he does not land the Cleveland berth. He will discuss arrangements with the Cleveland owners this week at New York, where all clubs will be represented at the league's annual draft and rules meeting.

That there would be another turnover in Cleveland coaches before the start of the 1939 season was deemed unlikely only a few weeks ago. Following the dismissal of Bezdek, Assistant Coach Art Lewis took charge of the Rams and under his guidance they created a stir with three consecutive victories.

The week following their rout by the Redskins, the Rams under Lewis defeated the strong Detroit Lions, and on the following Sunday they licked the Chicago Bears. In a return game at Chicago the next week the Rams repeated their triumph over the Bears and Lewis, a former Giant tackle, was hailed as the coaching sensation of the league.

However, with Cleveland fans finally excited about their team and pouring out in a record crowd, the Rams took a woeful 28-7 beating from the Packers and lost return engagements with the Lions and Cardinals.

Cub, Giant Players Who Figured in Year's Biggest Baseball Deal

Lazzeri Gets His Release From Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Tony Lazzeri received a birthday present from the Chicago Cubs today—a request-ed one which ended his puzzling one-year connection with the National League club.

LAZZERI

The taciturn veteran, 34 years old today, who spent the 1938 season as a Cub utility infielder and pinch-hitter after more than a decade of stardom with the New York Yankees, sent Owner P. K. Wrigley the following wire: "Am making formal request for release, appreciate same." To which Wrigley immediately replied: "Granted."

From his home near San Francisco Lazzeri said he had "four or five offers" to play with major league teams and expects to accept one within a week. What he wants to do, he said, "is play—none of this sitting on the bench for me."

He did a lot of that the past season. During the opening weeks of the campaign he filled in brilliantly at shortstop and second base. From then on, however, he was used sparingly and, for the most part, was not particularly effective.

He signed with the Cubs in 1937 after his release by the Yankees. Reports immediately blossomed that he was in line for the Cub managership, but Catcher Gabby Hartnett took that job when Charlie Grimm was dismissed in July and it was said Lazzeri was not considered for the post.

Other games: State Department vs. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Bureau of Standards vs. National Archives, 8:20; Social Security Board vs. G. A. O., 7:10, and Public Health Service vs. Farm Credit Administration, 9:30.

Send Jurges, Demaree and O'Dea to N.Y.

Giants and Chicago Swing Winter's First Big Players Deal; No Cash Involved

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Manager Gabby Hartnett, of Chicago's Cubs, went to work tonight on the "house-cleaning" job he promised after his club lost four straight games to the New York Yankees in the World Series.

The ruddy-faced boss of the Cubs last October said he was ready to trade anyone on the club except a favored four—Pitchers Dizzy Dean, Bill Lee and Clay Bryant and Third Baseman Stanley Hack, to build a more powerful club.

Today at New Orleans he acquired Outfielder Hank Leiber, Shortstop Dick Bartell and Catcher Gus Mancuso from the New York Giants. In return he gave Outfielder Frank Demaree, Shortstop Billy Jurges and Ken O'Dea, a young catcher.

No Cash Involved

No cash was involved in the deal, which was consummated by Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, and Horace C. Stoneham, president of the Giants, over the telephone from the minor league meeting at New Orleans. Hartnett and Clarence Rowland one of the Cub scouts, concluded the negotiations with President Stoneham and Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, in the Southern metropolis.

The deal was the biggest and most important thus far of the winter trade season.

In trading Jurges, a marvelous fielding shortstop, Hartnett broke up one of the greatest keystone combinations in baseball—Jurges and Billy Herman, Cub second baseman and captain of the team. Jurges, 27 years old, joined the Cubs in 1931 and reached his peak in 1937 when he led the National League shortstops by 15 points.

Regarding the trade, Owner Wrigley said, "we regard it as a good deal for both clubs. It should strengthen each. In acquiring Leiber we will have a long, hard-hitting outfielder that we so badly needed."

Bartell Batted .262

Bartell, 30 years old, participated in 147 games with the Giants last season, batting .262. Leiber hit .289 for 98 games. Mancuso, sharing the catching duties with Harry Danning, got into 52 games and clouted the ball at the rate of .343, according to unofficial averages.

The Cubs have been angling for a reliable catcher to relieve Hartnett of some of his arduous backstopping duties. Next season he will start his eighteenth year with the Cubs. O'Dea proved unsatisfactory last season when injuries twice forced Hartnett to the side lines. Mancuso is 33 years old and is rated as a heady catcher in handling pitchers. O'Dea is 25 years old and was acquired by the Cubs from Columbus of the American Association in 1935.

Demaree slightly outhit Leiber last season, according to unofficial averages, clouting .273, but participated in 31 more games than the Giant outfielder. Leiber is 26 years old, Demaree 28.

O'Dea, getting into 86 games last season, batted .263. Jurges hit .243 in 137 games.

Meanwhile, at New Orleans:

The rumor wheel also said Frankie Frisch, former St. Louis Cardinal manager, was slated either to take over managership of New Orleans or join the Giants as coach. Should Frisch hook up with the Giants and a working agreement develop, the dope was that Frank J. (Pancho) Snyder, Giant coach, would succeed Larry Gilbert as skipper at New Orleans.

Col. Seymour Weiss, president of the New Orleans Club, said he had four men under consideration, Frisch being one of them.

Other rumors linked the swap of Outfielder Enos Slaughter, of the St. Louis Cardinals, for the Chicago Cub outfielder, Augie Galan, and Pitcher Tex Carleton, and the trade of Bozey Berger, utility infielder of the Chicago White Sox, to the St. Louis Browns for Pitcher Russell Van Atta.

Indians Want Lazzeri

Manager Oscar Vitt, of the Cleveland Indians, reported he was interested in signing, as utility infielder and coach, Tony Lazzari, who was granted his unconditional release by the Chicago Cubs. He said Lazzari understood the situation and he would entertain a proposition from him.

More than 1,000 delegates, including Judge K. M. Landis, major league commissioner, and Judge William G. Bramham, commissioner of the minors, were on hand for the opening session of the association at whose business confabs action was likely to be taken to place all the minor leagues on a uniform basis.

President Bramham's annual report will be read to the opening session of the minor league gathering tomorrow. Thursday's session on rules and the major-minor agreement will have as its principal bit of business a proposal calling for a showdown on the question of "covering up" prospective young players through "subterfuge."

Other amendments to be considered seek uniform class rules for all leagues, where player limits will permit, to decide championships on the basis of regular season standings,

Anne Leith Scores on Sober Sides in Open Race at Warrenton

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 6.—Approximately 350 spectators today watched Miss Anne Leith, of Middleburg, riding Sober Sides, win the open event of the first annual point-to-point races of the Old Dominion Hounds near Orlean today.

Sober Sides, owned by Harry Worcester Smith, covered the muddy 5 miles over the farms of John Hinckley and John T. Ramey in 9:51½. Nine entries finished the race.

Frances Thornton Greene, astride Faint Clover, was second, and Mrs. George Cutting, of Warrenton, winner of the last Warrenton Hunt point-to-point, was third on Irish Buckle.

E. Kenneth Jenkins, of Warrenton, won the 190-pound event on Seaweed, making the 5-mile course in 10:10 3-5. Crompton Smith was second and Alex Mackay Smith, of White Post, third.

In this second event T. Beatty Brown, of Upperville, fell and was bruised and shaken up, but not otherwise injured.

The ladies' side-saddle race attracted only two entries, but ended in a dead heat. Mrs. John A. Hickley, of Orlean, took an early lead on Shotover, but was finally overtaken by Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, of Warrenton, on War Captor. They took the last hurdle neck and neck and finished even. The coin toss was won by Mrs. Winmill, former master of fox hounds of the Warrenton Hunt.

Nats Sell Hogsett To Minneapolis; Price Is Low

Hogsett was sold for an unannounced sum below the waiver price of $7,500. All American and National League teams waived on his services.

A four-hit shutout of the Yankees in his first start for the Nats last season was the lone distinction of Hogsett in 1938. He was acquired from the Browns last winter in a swap for Pitcher Ed Linke. Retaining little of his former speed, Hogsett was forced to depend chiefly on his side-arm curve and was of little help to the Nats in either starting or relief roles.

Hogsett was signed by the Detroit Tigers in 1929, but did not clinch a major league berth until 1934. He helped the Tigers to two pennants and was traded to the Browns in 1936 in the deal for First Baseman Jack Burns after Jake Powell had fractured the wrist of Hank Greenberg.

Gus Welch Resigns As A. U. Grid Coach

Lack of Material and 2 Straight Poor Seasons Believed to Have Prompted Surprise Action; Staff Cassell Is Likely Successor

By Jack Munhall.

Gus Welch, former Carlisle football hero, veteran coach, story-teller extraordinary and one of the city's most colorful sporting characters, yesterday resigned his position as director of athletics and head football coach at American University.

In confirming the resignation which Welch announced at a meeting of the Football Writers Association, Gene Wolf, A. U. publicity director, last night was unable to advance any reasons for his surprising action.

"All I know," said Wolf, "is that Welch has resigned. I know of no trouble between him and school officials which would have provoked the resignation and as far as I know no one has been appointed to succeed him."

Stafford H. Cassell, present A. U. basketball coach and a 1936 graduate of the Methodist school, is expected to be promoted to the position held by Welch. Cassell, a basketball and football star while at American University, is to receive his master's degree in physical education at Penn State next summer.

Welch made no statement yesterday afternoon and could not be reached last night to offer any explanation of his action which came as a complete surprise to even his close associates. It is believed he had become dissatisfied with the lack of football material which, in a large measure, was responsible for two straight bad seasons. American won only one football game this year.

Open to Offers

Although Welch operates a boys' summer camp near Natural Bridge, Va., and it was reported he planned to retire from the coaching game to devote his full time to it, friends say he is open to coaching offers.

Jovial, quick to make friends, Welch was very well liked in athletic circles here, where his keen wit and glib tongue made him a popular after-meal speaker. His stories concerning his trials and troubles with American University's 15-man football squad this season probably will become legendary.

Last year Welch received Nationwide publicity for his efforts to introduce a "kicking co-ed." The young lady, who remained anonymous, had already been chosen and was being instructed in the art of booting the ball through the posts when the dean of women, over the protests of virtually the entire student body, squelched the idea.

One of Welch's classic funny stories this season had to do with his "30-second football course" which he delivered on the bench to beginners just before sending them into their first varsity football game. In this brief talk, according to Welch, the freshman was told all he should know about the position he was to play.

Plenty of Tricks

It was claimed, though not proved, that Welch would uniform cheer leaders and other innocent students and sit them on the A. U. bench to deceive the other team into be-

Civic and Fraternal Leaders Meet, Plan To Press Fight

Washington's drive for a national coliseum received added impetus last night at an enthusiastic meeting of civic and fraternal leaders at the Hamilton Hotel, who voiced their determination to stick to their guns until their efforts are crowned with success.

With J. Leighton Cornwell, of the Touchdown Club, presiding, the group discussed ways and means of financing the project, and of getting plans and purposes of the proposed stadium before the entire Nation. It was voted to launch a national publicity campaign to acquaint every State and community with the idea, and to enlist their support in the matter.

The group also voted to solicit small sums from business men, merchants and organizations to finance the campaign. Buck O'Neil, chairman of the publicity committee, announced it would begin work immediately in this direction.

As has been pointed out in the past, the proposed field will house civic and educational enterprises as well as sports events and will be available to all national organizations throughout the year. It was suggested that one outstanding football game might be scheduled each year, proceeds from which would be contributed to some charitable cause.

Ralph Pittman, secretary of the general committee, was named chairman of a committee to ascertain the cost of the coliseum, after which suitable methods of raising the necessary sum will be charted.

Among those attending the meeting were Ted Welliver, George

O'Brien Blushes as He Gets Trophy as Nation's Grid Ace

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Little Davey O'Brien, the pigskin passer from Texas Christian University, who never gets flustered on a football field, blushed furiously tonight when he had to stand up before a crowd of 1,200 New Yorkers and receive the John Heisman Memorial Award as "the outstanding football player of the year."

The crowd of notables, ranging from Postmaster General James A. Farley and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, down to half-forgotten "Old Blues" who used to play football themselves, packed the gymnasium of the Downtown Athletic Club for the dinner and presentation. The trophy was presented to O'Brien by Walter P. Holcombe, club president.

The Heisman Trophy, given annually by the Downton Athletic Club in memory of its former athletic director, is awarded on the basis of a Nation-wide poll of sports writers.

As he gave it to O'Brien, Holcomb said it was a token of esteem not only as a great football player but as a great sportsman.

"May I remind you here that exceptional men have been great factors in the history of mankind," he added. "We hope your success in after life will be as great as your first success."

O'Brien, turning bright red as he rose, again insisted his teammates deserved most of the credit. "I can't possibly tell you how much I appreciate this," he said. "I wish to thank my coaches and two captains, Insull Hale and Ki Aldrich, and my teammates, without whose playing I wouldn't be here tonight.

"We have had a great time here and New York City has shown us Texans a big time."

Davey's mother, Mrs. E. M. K. O'Brien turned out to be the most popular speaker of the evening although she competed against such experienced dinner-outs as Farley, Amon Carter, of Fort Worth, who headed the party of 12 that came from Texas for the event; Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul of Texas, E. M. Waits, president of Texas Christian University, and Coach Leo (Dutch) Meyer.

"I deeply appreciate the praise David has received as a football player," she said, "but the words of praise given him as a young American make me even more proud. David, to his mother, always has been an All-American."

To Meyer went the credit for the best "crack" of the evening when he remarked, "think of it. He threw 19 touchdown passes, more than some teams score in a whole season. But these teams get invited to the Rose Bowl."

You Can't Judge Football Teams On Past Performances, Baugh Says

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh

Forward Passing Champion National Football League.

The uncertainty of football has never been better illustrated than by what happened during the past week-end. It was a striking example of how the efficiency of a football team can vary from week to week.

SAMMY BAUGH.

There were four distinct surprises—two in college football, and two in the professional league. I mean, of course, Notre Dame's 13-0 defeat by Southern California, Mississippi's 47-0 loss to Tennessee, the Washington Redskins' 36-0 beating at the hands of the Giants, and the Philadelphia Eagles' 21-7 victory over Detroit.

According to reports, Notre Dame did not play good football against Southern California. Yet when I saw the Irish beat Minnesota, they had everything. It was inconceivable that they could lose to a team that had been licked by Alabama and the University of Washington.

But football can't be judged strictly on past performances. There are too many other factors to consider—mental attitudes, the strain of keeping records clean, and the allowances to be made for improvement. Southern California undoubtedly was a vastly improved team against the Irish, hardly to be compared with the team that lost to Alabama, 19 to 7, in the season's opener. The Trojans simply came along faster than the experts could foresee.

Tennessee's victory over Mississippi was not an upset, but the 47-0 score by which the Vols won the game most certainly was. Mississippi had demonstrated that it was a strong club, if not a champion team. Nobody would dare to predict that any college could score 47 points against Mississippi in a single afternoon. But that's what happened. And Tennessee's victory by that score must certainly go down as one of the finest feats of the year.

The professionals are no more immune to this week-to-week fluctuation in ability than the colleges, despite the fact that they are older, more experienced and supposed to be cooler heads. That Redskins-Giants game of last Sunday is the perfect example.

Earlier in the year, the Redskins, riddled by injuries, were beaten by the Giants, 10-7. We came up to the second Giants' game at full strength and as a vastly improved club, we thought. And what happens? The Giants lick us, 36-0. It is truly unexplainable, unless you put it down as a case of one team being "hot" on a certain afternoon while another, with conditions apparently favoring it, hits a new low for no apparent reason on the same day.

That Eagles-Lions affair at Detroit also was typical. The Lions went into that game with what was supposed to be the greatest running attack in pro football. The Eagles were not rated as a good team defensively. The Eagles were merely playing out the schedule and had no incentive. The Lions were shooting for the league championship. The game was important to them.

Yet what happened at Detroit? The Eagles got "hot," scored a touchdown on the second play of the game, and had a three-touchdown lead before the Lions could get within 40 yards of the goal. It is games of this sort that are enough to make football experts seek their hideouts. Football may be a science, but it will never be an exact science. Humans and their actions are too unpredictable.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Quintet Beats Rockville Cagers, 15 to 10

Victors Led By Shumate With 7 Points

Open Scoring Early In First Period and Hang Up 8-4 Tally At End of Half

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School quint, which went to the finals of the South Atlantic basketball tournament last year, opened its season with a bang yesterday, beating Rockville, Montgomery High's five in the Rockville Gymnasium, 15 to 10.

High scorer of the tilt was lanky Johnny Shumate, a reserve with last year's outstanding squad, with 7 points. He opened the scoring early in the first period, and kept the yellow-clad basketers of Bethesda ahead until he was removed late in the final quarter. There was some doubt before game time that he could play at all due an injured knee.

The low-scoring contest was hard fought throughout. At the end of that he could play at all due to an a 2-2 deadlock. The two goals were tallied by Shumate and Tommy Ray, diminutive forward of the Orange. The second period had only started when Rockville's Bob Slater fouled Substitute Dick Baursfield and the latter made one of his two free shots good. From that point on, Bethesda held the lead.

Shumate and Jim Hollis were able to add a field goal apiece to their team's margin in the second period, Rockville dropping behind with only 2 points, scored by Dawson Wootten on two foul shots. The rest period saw Bethesda out in front, 8-4.

Rockville was the only team to hang up a point in the third session. Slater sank a short and followed it with a long one-handed effort which brought the Orange to within one point of Bethesda going into the final period. The threat was ended, however, when Jimmy Kinsman and Shumate each sank a field goal as the fourth period started. Francis Hughes also dropped a two-pointer for the winners, Rockville counting with but three single-pointers by Cleveland, Ray and Slater.

Coach Ralph Keller, of Rockville, used the same five men throughout and seemed happy at the final outcome. Last year the Orange dropped two decisions to its neighbors nearer Washington, both by wide margins. Though Bethesda noticeably suffered from the toll of graduations, the fact that only a five-point margin separated it and Rockville at the end seemed entirely satisfactory to Coach Keller.

Besides Shumate, who will probably be the mainstay of the Bethesdans this season, Coach Allen Vogt has several regulars and substitutes who might do as well as the 1937 team. Hillery Hayden, a left-handed guard, is the brother of Carol Hayden, last year's star, and may prove just as effective. Jimmy Hollis and Bob Whalen also appear to have the makings of respectable performers.

Eastern High Grid Team Given Letters

Dobson, Maryland University mentor, talked on the athletic policies of Pennsylvania institutions. The chat of Magoffin, one of the District's ace football referees, concerned the recent upset victory of Duke University over Pitt's Panthers. He officiated at that game, as well as at numerous high school clashes during the fall. Guyon, the silver-haired former friend of Jim Thorpe, filled his speech with praise of Coach Dobson. The latter, he said, was the greatest brokenfield runner of all time during his active career at Princeton.

Boys receiving letters included 6 backfield men, 13 linesmen and Curry Obenshain, student manager of the grid squad. The players getting the award were Kidwell, Pieri, McAlwee, Hallama, Carroll, Hooe, Soo, Cohill, Vaniglio, Kirk, Teague, Wolwine, Petro, Goldstein, Lewis, Fyfe, Pieri, Lovett and Best.

U. S. Government League Opens

Action in the U. S. Government Basketball League gets under way tonight at the Bolling Field gymnasium, Anacostia, with three games on the evening's card. The opening battle will feature the undefeated Army Medical Center basketers of Walter Reed Hospital against Bolling Field's quintet. The game starts at 7 o'clock.

At 8:10, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing meets General Accounting Office, and the final game is between Fort Myer and C. C. C. Camp NP-7. Referee for all the games will be Tony Latona, former Georgetown cage star.

Army Medical will have a forward in its lineup, Xavier Cosse, who is well on the way to the point-scoring championship of the team. He has accounted for 31 markers in two games to date. Charlie Kickerson of the same team is close behind Cosse with 25 points. Fort Myer's Morrison is at present third high among the scorers with 21 points.

Wrestling Under Ring Commission? No, Says Hazen

Grunts and growls must continue as part of the wrestling show locally and wouldn't under the proposal placing these activities under the District Boxing Commission, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen declared yesterday.

No wrestling fan himself, Commissioner Hazen still believes the public, if it wants it, should continue to howl at the pranks and antics of Savoldis, Londoses and Duseks.

When the matter came up yesterday for the second time this year, the Commissioners decided to disapprove the proposal.

"I don't think it would work," Hazen said.

Buck Everett Seeks Rematch With Boyd

Pointing with pardonable pride to the Buck Evereti-Bill Boyd skirmish, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn last night reluctantly admitted the Lou Gevinson-Pete Galiano bout coming up Monday night at the Arena should be at the same breath-taking pace, and should appease the customers' ravenous appetite for action.

"If that Boyd-Everett match was fixed," Goldie beamed, "I'm gonna try to fix 'em all. I'd like to book more 'dives' like that one. It was so exciting I even forgot to keep an eye on the box office, and when Everett came through the third round on his feet I didn't care if we did lose money. That Everett's a sweetheart. He gave the fans a run for their money, and it did my heart good to see him make such a fight of it."

Everett, incidentally, asked for a return bout with the gob yesterday after protesting to the District Boxing Commission about the time wasted examining his gashed eye and forehead between rounds. He contended his seconds did not have time to patch up the damage properly, and he was half blinded by blood going out for the fatal seventh.

Mamakos Fights Friday Night

Steve Mamakos, local welterweight, will appear on the card at the Fallsway Arena in Baltimore, Friday night, meeting Lambertine Williams, of Baltimore, in a ten-round semifinal bout.

On the same card will be another Washington boy, Eddie Flagstedt, who will face Jimmy Leto in a six-rounder.

According to Matchmaker Les Sponsler, if Mamakos gets by Williams he will be matched with a "big name" opponent on the charity show at the arena on December 30.

Bill Ackerman

on Fishing

There is a distinct trend toward fishing in the streams of our national forests, and there is good reason for this, for when that big brookie, or brown, takes your cunningly laid fly next spring, there will have been an increasing amount of foresight to guarantee his presence and well-being.

ACKERMAN.

Streams in national forests as well as in many State refuges, are not only being stocked by United States hatchery-reared fish, but to gain maximum success in trout planting, the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, the National Forest Service, and State conservation commissions are checking up on mountain streams to determine the amount of natural food available at various points, and just how many trout a mile of any given stream can nourish.

For some time fish culturists have suspected the promiscous dumping of hatchery trout has been in defiance of varying natural conditions. The hit or miss planting is giving away in Pisgah, George Washington, and Allegheny National Forests, as well as in hundreds of game refuges in North Carolina, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, before planting based upon the result of stream study, with the result that trout are now being placed in widely varying numbers in different forest streams.

The method employed calls for the taking of samples by placing a sampling net in the riffle of the stream, which is the food-bearing area. The rocks and gravel in the square foot covered by the sampling net are shaken up, and the current washes the insect life from the rocks into the net. The sample thus obtained is then placed in a solution and kept for examination in the laboratory. Examiners then determine the amount of available fish food in each, and calculate the amount of fish pounds the streams can support.

Samples are taken from typical places—swift as well as slow-flowing areas. Davidson River in Pisgah National Forest, for example, has eight stations that are checked once each month, on the same day, and at the same time each day. Such sampling, it is believed, gives an accurate picture of food conditions the year around.

A typical sample shows the infinate richness in a foot of stream bottom. Stoneфly and mayfly, caddis fly larvae, crayfish, salamanders, and many other larvae. Organisms such as adult flies, grasshoppers, spiders, caterpillars and other insects that fall into the stream from bushes and trees are sampled by a method known as drift sampling.

From the many thousands of samples taken each year, Federal culturists believe the problem of the starving trout will eventually be solved by their studies.

They are also learning a lot about the habits of fish found in the coldwater mountain streams. Trout, particularly, planted in certain areas are identified as to location through the clipping of their fins. The extent and direction of their migrations are being checked as they are fished out by sportsmen, or seined by game wardens.

States such as New Jersey and Maryland stock many streams knowing that trout will not propagate in them, and expect the fish so stocked to be caught out the same year.

Unusual Collection Of Athletes Works Tomorrow Night

One of the strangest collections of athletes ever gathered together under one roof will be turned loose at Turner's Arena tomorrow night at the weekly meeting of the Fuss and Muss Club. Promoter Joe Turner closed out the program last night and admits he himself is a bit puzzled as to exactly what the customers will see.

Turner emphatically denied that "Jo Jo, the dog-face boy," was down for a struggle with "Stretcho," the rubber-skin rough-necked, but thought it a good idea and promised to look into the matter. The promoter has gotten the next-best attractions, however, including Nanjo Singh, barefoot Hindu husky.

Shoeless Singh will wiggle toes against an old Western Maryland boy, Nick Campofreda, once one of Dick Harlow's best gridmen.

But before we forget, the triple disturbance will be caused by Joe Savoldi and the masked Golden Terror—he of the long, fleece-lined, orange underwear, who insists on throwing in a couple of unofficial quarrels with innocent bystanders every time he works.

Walter Percy, the Englishman who gave up dropping his h's for dropping wrestlers, meets Casey Berger in the semifinal, and this may be a disgustingly clean match. There is a movement afoot among the burghers to fine any man wrestling cleanly 500 pesos. This sad state of affairs may be offset to some extent by the other matches, which include a Hungarian importation, Haron Kruskamp, fresh from the olde sod, against Hank Metheny; and Sammy Cohan vs. Frank Brown.

By Richards Vidmer

Room for Two

New York, Dec. 6.—There is a young fellow in our town being feted and fed. At dinners and banquets, luncheons and other affairs he is being hailed as the greatest football player of the year. Tonight at a dinner at the downtown athletic club he was awarded the Heisman Trophy, symbolic of the honor, and his name was added to that of such illustrious predecessors as Jay Berwanger, the fleet-footed back of Chicago; Larry Kelley, Yale's immortal end, and Clint Frank, the bespectacled, studious young lad who played every second at Yale as though it were the last second of football he ever would play.

VIDMER.

This young fellow is named David O'Brien, and they call him Slingshot Davey because he throws forward passes like a sharpshooter, completed some 55 per cent of his tosses during the current campaign and carried his Texas Christian University team through the season undefeated and untied. Carried them to the Sugar Bowl game, and was voted the outstanding player of the year.

Now there are some who saw a lot of football who don't agree with the election. Some there are who think Sid Luckman deserved the honor, though he played not on an undefeated, untied team, but on a Columbia eleven that was frequently beaten. Personally, I am among those dissenters.

Yet Davey O'Brien is as nice a young fellow as you would want to meet. He carries his honors modestly, quietly, inconspicuously. And as he walked into "21" today, surrounded by coaches, followers of T. C. U. team, and teammates, a casual observer wouldn't have been able to pick him out except for his size.

Not that he stood out from the crowd like a giant among pigmies. Quite the contrary. He was a little fellow among so many giants. And while most everybody was surrounding him, besieging him with questions, asking how he did it and how it felt to be such a celebrity, I noticed a big, broad-shouldered, solemn-looking young fellow standing off to one side and beaming.

Second Hand Information

"Who is that guy over there?" I asked out of sheer curiosity. He looked so pleased with the adulation that was being accorded to little Davey.

"That's Ki Aldrich," someone said.

I looked again, for I had heard of Ki Aldrich. Someone who was familiar with the T. C. U. team told me long ago that the real key to the success of Texas Christian was not Davey O'Brien at all, but this fellow Charlie Aldrich, the center. And I wondered how Aldrich reacted to all the praise and publicity that was being heaped upon his teammate. So I asked him.

"How about O'Brien?" I asked. "Is he as good as they say he is?"

"They haven't said half enough," the big center answered without even stopping to think. "Listen, that little fellow is the greatest football player anybody ever saw. I'm only sorry more people haven't seen him play."

How's That Again?

This seemed very high praise indeed coming from one who was in a position to take a few bows himself. And how did the other fellows on the team feel about O'Brien? Were they jealous or envious of the publicity he had received?"

"I don't quite understand what

Carroll Wright to Defend His Golden Gloves Title Tonight

Card of 15 Bouts Is Set For Arena

Marion Pulzone Will Meet Titleholder in 135-Pound Class; Harris Boxes Irwin

Clouting Carroll Wright, upset specialist who slugged his way to the District Golden Gloves 135-pound title in spectacular fashion a year ago, starts his title defense in one of 15 bouts at Joe Turner's Arena tonight beginning at 8:15 o'clock.

Wright is to face vastly improved Marion Pulzone, of A. B. & W. Terminal, in one of the senior features while Lewis Stea, unattached, is paired with Norbert Lehrner, Merrick Boys' Club, in a 147-pound senior spot.

Invariably a crowd pleaser in Golden Gloves warfare, Pulzone will be out to create an upset of upsets in his bout with Wright tonight. Though resting on the short end of the odds, the plucky Alexandria boy is a grimly determined and rugged youngster with a great fighting heart.

Thrills and Upsets

Otherwise tonight's colorful card will feature 13 quarter finals novice bouts in which willing and well-conditioned youngsters are expected to provide their full quota of thrills and several upsets.

Numbered among the novices who are to show tonight are Eddie Stoneman, Billy Miller, Joe Vernon, Leonard Lehrner, Billy Colbert, Dan Pilkington, Joe Lewis, Bernard Daley, Stanley Stephenson, Ken Swann, Mike O'Brien, Howard Blafkin, Bobby Hockenberry, Ben Abernathy, Tony Galifaro, Willie Sheehi, Ronald Ashen, Clyde Hayes, Johnny Mancini, Don Tucker, Harvey Schweir, Alex Glendenning, Henry Johnson, Nick Mancini, Basil Harris and Clarence Irwin.

Harris Faces Irwin

One of the features of the night will be the introduction of heavyweight rivalry in the novice class when Basil Harris, of Georgetown University, faces Clarence Irwin, of Pete's A. C.

Victory Post Wins In Indoor Baseball

Victory Post of the American Legion came to life at Tech gym last night and scattered the Treasury Department indoor baseball team all over the floor. The final score was 19 to 0.

Oren Shanks was knocked from the box in the second inning when Harold Steffes slammed the ball high into the leftfield bleachers. "Chief" Greenberg threw his beanbag ball at the legionnaires who solved it by turning around and batting left-handed.

Harold Steffes turned in another sterling job of pitching by holding the Treasurers to three scattered hits, and poling out two triples and a single himself.

Won't Tear Up Pirates

William Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates, indicated his club had nothing especially in mind. "We didn't make a deal at last year's meeting and I don't know what will happen this time." Harold (Pie) Traynor, the Pirate manager, reached the scene today.

"We have no intention of tearing our club apart just because we didn't win the pennant. Our club is still a good one, but we might be interested in a first-class catcher, a pitcher and perhaps a couple of outfielders."

Benswanger declined to say whether Outfielder Paul Waner would be placed on the market, but the Pirate chieftain did spike a report that Shortstop Arky Vaughan might be swapped or sold.

Eddie Dyer, vice president of the Houston Club of the Texas League and director of a half-dozen smaller clubs in the St. Louis Cardinals chain, was offered the managership of the Houston Club today by the St. Louis officials. Dyer asked for a few days to consider.

Lobby gossip had the Chicago Cubs angling for the services of Zeke Bonura, Washington first baseman, but the boss of the National League champions was noncommittal.

Manager Doc Prothro, who succeeded Jimmy Wilson as pilot of the Philadelphia Phillies, said he had nothing on the fire.

Carey for Marcum

The St. Louis Browns announced the trade on undisclosed terms of Infielder Tom Carey to the Boston Red Sox for Pitcher Johnny Marcum.

In addition to their three-for-three players deal with the Cubs, the Giants announced Chalmer (Bill) Cissell, veteran second baseman, had been sold to the Hollywood Club of the Pacific Coast League on a straight cash deal.

The American Association's board of directors decided today to open the league's 1939 baseball schedule April 13 and end it September 10.

The board voted to continue the league's regular playoff series of 4 games out of 7, the winner to meet the International League's standard bearer in the little world series.

Mike J Kelly, president of the Minneapolis Club, was re-elected vice president of the association, and Leo J. Miller, new president of the Indianapolis outfit, was made a member of the board of directors.

Barons Buy Wetherell

The Birmingham Barons, Southern Association Club, announced the straight cash purchase of Del Wetherell, right-handed pitcher, from Montreal. The amount of cash was not disclosed. Wetherell was drafted from Memphis by Montreal at the end of the 1937 playing season.

Jersey City announced the sale of Infielder Babe Herman to Hollywood, and St. Paul the sale of Outfielder George Washington to Shreveport.

Elliott Roosevelt, of Fort Worth, Tex., appearing here today before a continued meeting of the Texas League board of directors, suggested an arrangement by which the Texas League would broadcast by radio their games during the playing season.

Mr. Roosevelt, son of the President, is president of the Texas State network radio broadcasting chain of 23 stations. He said that through his proposal four games could be broadcast simultaneously in Texas.

The South Atlantic Baseball League, with a 140-game regular schedule in store for 1939, will adhere to the Shaughnessy playoff system, the directors announced today.

Dr. E. M. Wilder, league president, from Auguta, Ga., reported 901,495 paid admissions last season and asserted the loop led all Class B circuits in this respect. The directors left at $2,400 a month the salary limit for every team of the Sally.

Arcadia Five Takes Over League Lead

Arcade-Pontiac Is Beaten Twice; Simon High Scorer; Marks Fall in Ladies' Loop

Arcadia took first place in the fast Columbia Heights League at the Arcadia Alleys last night by defeating the erstwhile league-leading Arcade-Pontiac team, two games to one.

Sam Simon, Arcade-Pontiac, was high individual scorer with a game of 160. Al Wright, Hessick Coal Co., won high individual set with 393. High team game went to Hessick, 638, ad Sholl's Cafe rolled 1,815 for high team set.

Welch took his college education first at Carlisle, where he was a football teammate of Jim Thorpe, the choice of many as the greatest player in the history of the game, and then at Dickinson, from where he was graduated. He remained there for three years as director of athletics and head football coach and then in 1917 enlisted and went overseas with the United States Army.

After the war, Welch played professional football with the Canton Bulldogs for one season and then accepted a position at Washington State as head football and boxing coach.

In 1923, after enjoying great success with State elevens, Welch resigned to go to Randolph-Macon, where for six years he coached football, basketball, baseball, track and boxing. At the end of that time, he moved over to the University of Virginia to become assistant football coach and lacrosse coach.

While with the Cavaliers, Welch gained recognition for his efforts in interesting neighboring schools in lacrosse. He is credited with the growth of the sport in Virginia.

Welch's last coaching position before he was hired by American University was with Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kans., where he served as director of athletics and head football coach.

The highlight of the annual Y. M. C. A. handball tournament is scheduled for tonight when Jack Schwartz and George Wendlandt, ranking No. 1 and 2 District players, respectively, clash for the first time this season on the Central "Y" courts at 9:30 o'clock.

Wendlandt, recently elected captain of the Y. M. C. A. handball team, has yet to score a victory over Schwartz in match play, but his steadily improving game appears to give him an even chance of upsetting the perennial District titleholder in tonight's encounter. Other matches tonight:

Sports Carnival Set For December 27 At Tech Gym

Under the direction of Harry English, supervisor of the Community Center Boys Clubs, the Community Center Department of the District of Columbia Public Schools will sponsor an indoor sports carnival for boys at Tech gymnasium December 27, from 7 p. m. until 10 p. m.

The carnival will be limited to bona fide members of boys' club organizations and boys may represent only one club. However, two boys may be entered in each event.

Competition will be available in four divisions. They are the 85-pound, 115-pound, 135-pound and unlimited classes. Seven events are listed on the program. Included are the 40-yard dash for the 85 and 115 pound classes; the running high jump, standing broad jump, 160-yard shuttle relay for the 85 and 115 pound classes.

Considerable interest has been manifested in the basketball foul-goal shooting contest; 50-yard dash for 135-pound and unlimited classes and the 440-yard circular relay for the 135-pound and unlimited classes. Several exhibitions of various types of athletic skill will be presented.

Winners of first, second or third places will be given medals, while the club scoring the highest number of points will receive a team trophy. Registration closes at midnight, December 23.

According to English, the department feels that the Christmas holidays provide a splendid time for the boys of Washington to meet in sportsmanlike competition. He also pointed out that Washington has no indoor games program on a city-wide basis and the Community Center Department director, Mrs. E. K. Peeples, felt a real need to sponsor something of this nature as an annual affair.

Unheralded Wins Charles Town Feature at $3.80

Star Mint Gets Place; Track Slow

Miss Davies' Horse Overcomes Lead to Win; Landlubber Runs in Third Spot

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 6.—Unheralded, one of the best horses ever to appear on this track, galloped away with the day's feature, winning by three lengths from E. K. Hillman's Star Mint with the Bristol Stable's Landlubber third in the field of six. Carrying the yellow and white colors of Miss Audrey Davies, Unheralded gave his backers some anxious moments while he trailed the pace of Star Mint but once away he circled the leader and it was no contest thereafter.

Unheralded's previous performance was a third in a blanket finish with Conquer and Clodion in the T. K. Lynch Memorial at Bowie Thanksgiving Day. Despite his class, Unheralded paid a $3.80 mutuel.

The race was run over the heavy, soggy track in the buggy horse time of 2 minutes. Conditions overhead, however, were ideal for the sport and a crowd of 4,000 participated.

James Pal Wins

The favorite players were off to a good start when James Pal, in the colors of A. B. Parker, made a show of his field in the first race. Under Jockey Cecil Coffman's handling, the son of Jamestown took the lead when asked and galloped home two lengths ahead of Flyfot. Gons Baby was third in the field of eight. The winner paid $4.60.

The closest finish of the meeting marked the second race when Accidental, owned by H. M. Simpson, won by a lip over the Brandon Stable's Bob Junior. The two juveniles hooked up at the sixteenth pole and Bob Junior seemed to be getting the better of his rival. However, right at the wire the daughter of Balko, bred by John Manfuso, of Washington, stuck out her nose and took the photo verdict. Accidental paid $9 and started a $34.20 daily double.

Rough Buddy Tires

Blind Talk put the finishing touches on the twin wager by taking the third race by a length. The 5-year-old gelding paid $8.20, but few in the crowd believed he could catch Rough Buddy. The latter had a long lead approaching the stretch but tired suddenly. Handley was third.

Early Broom, at $8.60, won the fourth race which was a rough and tumble affair. Jackemma, Ktwo and Goantell were bumped in a jam soon after the break, when Square Play lugged into horses. Tuleyries Star, the pace setter most of the way, was second with Bynums Run third.

LAST SCAMP, quick to front at once, drew out gradually and won with much speed in reserve. DOCTORS GIFT improved position after half and closed gamely. ALLENE showed a game effort, but tired in closing stages. KESWICK HILL was held safe throughout. POCKETPIECE had early speed and faltered badly.

At The Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

In Thoroughbred Breeding, a publication devoted to racing on the West Coast, I found something new in starting horses. Here it is: "Quite by accident, Edward Thomas, a starter, found the cure for fractious horses at the gate. Found how to get surly old gallopers, acting like gentlemen, into full motion quickly and accurately. Edward, at Longacres, introduced the 'delay behind the barrier'—a matter of two minutes. In this time he checks the horses' names, equipment, riders, and gives instructions to boys and assistant starters. Horses stand still, they settle, they repose. Result—when they are asked to venture into the stalls a few moments later—you see a different type of animal. Nine times out of ten Thomas marches them right in there, snatches the string, presses the button—and away they go."

The "delay behind the gate" was inaugurated for two reasons. First—Longacres, new to the "tote" found its customers slow in making up their minds. Hundreds were getting shut out. Curious customers waited for the last-minute line. Old man tote does that to racing audiences. So it behooved the management to either get a little delay once the horses were at the gate—or else suffer serious losses in total play.

Second—Mr. Thomas, during Hollywood Park's meeting, one day forgot a horse—and sent the field away one steed shy. Mr. Thomas never quite got over that incident. Therefore, Mr. Thomas determined to check his horses upon their arrival at his station.

Mr. Thomas conceived of combining the check-up procedure and the "delay behind the gate." He did so. And lo—he found a miracle happening. In the case of Redneck, a notorious rogue. After idling away two minutes behind the gate, undisturbed by assistants' hands, Redneck went right up in there. He laid on the gate, calm, cool and collected, "Standing" had done the trick.

"Standing" also worked marvels upon the rambunctious Marco, who can't start at some tracks; it made a little lady out of Lucky Song; it altered the deportment of the flighty Albino; the Hawaiian headache, Mamalahoa no longer tears an assistant's ear off, and saves his own from a violent jerk and pull, because "Mama" goes in there now—thanks to repeated lessons in "standing," before the start.

Mac Phalaris came down from Canada the other day. They said he would delay Mr. Thomas' commencement, half an hour, at least. Mac's supposed to be quite a skylarker at the barrier. Mac did nothing of the sort. In the pondering period he stood with his brethren. Just standing. And when Mr. Thomas said, "come on up in here," old Mac went right along like any of the others.

In foreign countries, where the turf game flourishes, "standing" is practiced on thoroughbreds, hours on end. "Standing" over there, and down there, is one reason why the foreign turf has few bad actors.

BILL.

First race—Last Chase, a winner over this track, seems capable of adding another purse at this abbreviated sprint distance. I can see no reason for mistakes. Tedmella has some class and should be a keen factor. Cats Cradle likes the course and is dangerous.

Second race—Tanganyika has performed well on half-milers and races at a distance he likes in this. I'm going to string along despite the top weight assignment. Gin Fritters set the pace for some fair ones on the big tracks. May find this route too long but deserves attention. Vendor's Lien for the show end.

Third race—I'm going to take a shot at the moon here. Envious closed gamely far behind good ones in Maryland but displayed a lot of energy. Campo, a newcomer hereabouts, is said to be good. Sheriff Eugene would have to be reckoned with if in action.

Fourth race—Cape Race has worked well and seems the best of the ordinary lot gathered for this test. The Swagman has performed well over this course in other years. Kaleida breaks off the rail and has speed.

Fifth race—Ocean Roll picks up six pounds and gets a shift in riders for this. However, he won so impressively last out that I'm forced to take him. Royal Business has a win and a second to her credit and is fit. French Trap should go well.

Sixth race—Dian

Big Board Bars Transactions in McKesson Stock

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today suspended from dealings the stocks and bonds of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., chemical manufacturers and liquor firm, to permit the exchange to investigate allegations made against the company in an equity receivership suit in Hartford, Conn.

Officials of the exchange said they had been informed that Vincent W. Dennis, corporation counsel of Hartford, had applied to the United States District Court there for the receivership as a holder of 2,000 shares of common stock. The exchange said its information was that the court appointed Mayor Thomas J. Spellacy of Hartford and A. S. Weissman, of New Haven, as temporary receivers.

The issues suspended from trading were McKesson & Robbins, $5 par common stock; the $3 series cumulative convertible preference stock of no-par value; and the 20-year 5½ per cent convertible debentures due May 1, 1950.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 6 (AP).—C. F. Michaels, executive vice president of the McKesson & Robbins, Inc., manufacturers and wholesalers of drugs and distilled liquor, said tonight, following a hastily called executive meeting, that "the receivers have satisfied themselves of the solvency of the company."

Michaels, in a formal statement, said in part: "The crude drug department of the business is the only department involved and there appears to be no question of the company's solvency and continuance in business."

Profit-Taking Cuts Gain in Wheat Prices

Winter Acreage Less Small Crop Forecast Exports Are Light

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Wheat prices climbed approximately a cent a bushel today, but later because of profit-taking lost part of the gain.

Unofficial monthly domestic crop figures showed winter wheat acreage abandonment larger than normal on the reduced acreage. The condition of winter wheat was reported the lowest on record, with one exception, and the 1939 probable harvest was forecast as the smallest since 1935.

Export purchases of North American grains today consisted of about 400,000 bushels of Canadian wheat and 100,000 bushels of corn from the United States.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛ to ⅜ above yesterday's finish, December 64½@64⅝, May, 67⅛@67. Corn, ¼ lower to ⅜ higher; December, 48⅝, May 51¼@51⅜. Oats, unchanged to ¼ up. Rye, varying from ⅛ decline to ½ advance, and provisions from 7 cents setback to a bulge of 2 cents.

Argentina Reports Large Wheat Surplus

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Argentine information bureau reported today it had been advised by cable that Argentina will have an exportable surplus of 5,500,000 tons of wheat this season as compared to the 2,000,000 tons of old wheat during 1938 without a carryover.

The estimate, said the bureau, was based on a statement by the Argentina grain elevator board that the area sown to wheat in Argentina totals 20,868,000 acres, compared with a 10-year average of 19,102,600 acres. The output, it was stated, will likely total 8,000,000 tons.

Stocks and Commodities Improve Franco-German Pact a Factor World Trade Picture Is Brighter

New York, Dec. 6.—Stocks and commodities improved today and a basis for the better feeling in the financial district was seen in the signing of a treaty between France and Germany and also in a somewhat improved trade picture on this side of the Atlantic. In addition to these two factors, and possibly exceeding them in importance, was the fact that the stock market has been drooping and a technical rebound was to be expected.

In any event, the list worked its way 0.30 point higher on the average and this meant gains of around 1 and 2 points for a number of the more volatile leaders. Trading picked up but failed to touch the 1,000,000 mark, amounting to 986,630 shares. This is better than the brokerage fraternity has enjoyed of late. Bonds also improved, including the Government list, and most of the commodities did better, including sugar futures, which suffered severely Monday following the announcement of the 1939 sugar quota by the AAA. Selling pressure in this market was again apparent at the opening, and there were early losses of 3 to 7 points, but a later recovery brought sugar futures back to close unchanged to 3 points higher.

The stock list was featured by strength in the steels, motors and aviation securities. Rails also were firmer on preliminary estimates which indicated a good flow of revenue freight traffic for the past week. Metals and oils were well supported. Utilities did not do as well as the balance of the list but losses were small. The trading did not take too kindly to the Supreme Court decision Monday in the case of the Consolidated Edison Co. While the National Labor Relations Board received its first rebuke at the hands of the court of last resort, the ruling also indicated that public utility companies cannot escape the New Deal merely because a major part of their business may be confined within the borders of one State.

Aircraft Stocks Advance

Aviation issues came back into prominence after an absence of about two weeks. Spurring interest in these securities was renewed evidence that this and other countries intend to go ahead with vigorous armament programs. Washington advices indicated that soon after Congress convenes an emergency appropriation of $100,000,000 will be requested for the Army Air Corps as the first step in this Government's armament program. New highs were the rule in this group and of the day's 15 most active stocks, four were aviation issues.

Speculation continued in New York Shipbuilding on the same stimulant and the common went to a new high, but at long last there was a reaction in the volatile preferred of this company, which dropped 2 points after equaling its former top for the year. Steels continued well supported despite the lower operations this week.

Most active stock of the day was Greyhound, which sold off fractionally after directors had declared the regular dividend of 20 cents and an extra of 30 cents, a year ago the extra was 50 cents.

A feature of the day was the suspension of trading in the common, preferred and bonds of McKesson & Robbins following the appointment of temporary equity receivers on the application of a stockholder at Hartford, Conn. There will be no interference with the company's operations, however.

Metals improved on talk that there might be some further restriction on foreign copper output. There was no change in the spot market here and lead prices eased. Anaconda was the most active of the group and gained a good fraction.

Treasury Bonds Higher

Commodities improved, wheat advancing a cent before profit taking cut down the gain. Private estimates indicating a winter wheat acreage abandonment larger than for any except one previous year spurred the buying. At the close wheat was ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher.

Listed bonds moved irregularly higher today, responding to the improved sentiment on the stock market with a moderate increase in transactions.

Governments generally were higher, with the exception of those issues which find competition in the new Treasury bonds that will appear on December 15. Turnover in this sector rose slightly, with the heaviest trading being done in the 2⅞s of 1960-55 and the 2½s of 1953-49. The registered 4s of 1954-44 added 27-32 of a point. Other gains were moderate.

In the rails, strength was shown by the Pennsylvania group, most of the New York Centrals, the Illinois Central, and Southern Railway issues. Chicago & Northwestern liens were soft as were the Wabash group. A mixed tendency was seen in the Santa Fe issues, the Baltimore & Ohio liens, Lehigh Valley, New Haven and Eries.

International Telephone & Telegraph were strong among the utility issues, while Commonwealth Edison showed a weak tendency. Consolidated Edison and Telephone were uneven.

In the industrial field, the Standard Oil debenture 3s rose to a new high of 105⅝, while the 2¼s equaled the year's previous top. The United States Steel 3¼s were just below the 1938 high. Bethlehem Steel and Republic, however, were slightly lower.

Foreign bonds showed an uncertain trend, with Buenos Aires, Bulgarian and some German, as well as Colombian, issues lower.

Cotton Prices Advance to Higher Level

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6. — Cotton today continued the recovery which got under way yesterday to close at net advances of 8 to 13 points. March rallied from 8.17 to 8.25, finishing at 8.24.

The market opened 3 to 6 points higher in response to the action of Liverpool and on trade and foreign buying. The initial gains attracted a little realizing but following slight partial setbacks, the market worked higher. Offerings generally were lighter following the recent liquidating movement. The rally carried prices about $1 a bale above yesterday's early low point for the movement.

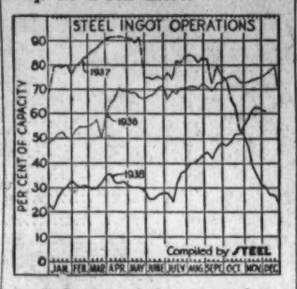
Daily Oil Output Falls 52,475 Barrels

Tulsa, Dec. 6 (AP).—A decline of 52,475 barrels daily in the national production of crude oil was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal for the week ending December 2. It brought the daily average down to 3,215,519.

Oklahoma declined 29,600 barrels daily average to 417,550; East Texas was up 370,135 and the State of Texas increased 5,062 to 1,272,702. California dropped 22,150 barrels daily to 641,750; Louisiana increased 1,880 to 260,925, and Kansas was off 7,760 to 148,240.

Steel Operations Dip at Year-End



Reflecting industry's reluctance to carry over heavy stocks of materials into the new year, national steel ingot operations dropped 1 point, to 61 per cent of capacity during the week ended December 3, according to Steel Magazine. Many States levy a tax on materials and stocks on hand at the close of the calendar year.

Business Cannot Run on Starter Banker Baker Says

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—J. Stewart Baker, chairman of the Bank of the Manhattan Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today "it is as impossible for our economic machine to run indefinitely on money borrowed by our Federal government as for an automobile to run on its self-starter."

"The present improvement in business," he said, "will not continue unless throughout the country men are convinced they are taking no undue risks in making business commitments and that they have a reasonable expectation of profit."

He said there was nothing so unsettling for business as the prospect of constant change in laws, and there recently had been indications "that the people of this country would like to see business men relieved of this uncertainty."

"Already it has had its effect on the business man," he continued, "and if he sees further signs that he is not to be exposed to more experimentation, it is my belief that business activity will increase."

39 Clergymen Join in Eulogy Of H. L. Rust

Many Friends Hear Praise by Dr. Freeman At Cathedral Service

Thirty-nine of the chief clergymen of the Washington Episcopal diocese and a large gathering of friends took part in a memorial diocesan service for the late Harry Lee Rust conducted at Washington Cathedral yesterday on the 77th anniversary of his birth.

Mr. Rust, widely known Washington real estate man and treasurer of the diocese, who died last August, was described in the service by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington as "an ideal layman, a man of high consecration and a Christian gentleman."

Attending the service were the boards of many diocesan institutions, the standing committee of the diocese, the entire organization of the H. L. Rust & Co. and members of the Washington Real Estate Board and other civic and business organizations.

Eulogized by Dr. Freeman

In his eulogy of Mr. Rust, Bishop Freeman said:

"He was a great Christian, and as great a servant of the church and a servant of His Lord. He had a simplicity of nature uncommon in our times and thought only of how best he might meet the day's duties and do them well.

"He was a man of simple ways and good ways, a man of utter candor whose word was his bond, a man sensitive and obedient to the will of God.

Church Aid 25 Years

Henry P. Blair, longtime business associate of Mr. Rust, recalled that he had served as diocesan treasurer for more than 25 years, and added:

"He made his mark in civic, religious and philanthropic as well as business circles."

Among members of Mr. Rust's immediate family present were his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr.; his grandson, Harry Lee Rust 3d; his granddaughter Miss Jane Rust; his nephew, James S. Rust, and Miss Marion M. Lee, the Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Lee, of Towson, Md.; Miss Emma Kent, Mrs. E. Rust Smith, Miss Maude Hodgkins, Mrs. W. W. Pierce and Miss Eleanor Pierce.

H. L. Rust, jr., has been appointed diocesan treasurer to succeed his father.

The staff of Washington Cathedral present at the service included Canon A. P. Stokes, Canon William M. Bradner, Canon Edward S. Dunlap, Canon Albert Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys; the Rev. James Henderson, chaplain of St. Alban's School; Canon Ze Barney Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany and chaplain of the Senate. Members of the Cathedral chapter also were present.

Robert, Waiter Who Served The Great at Press Club, Dies

Heart Ailment That Kept Him From Taking Dinner to President's Table Nov. 19, Brings End; Funeral Rites Friday

Robert, famous ebony-colored waiter at the National Press Club, is dead, and there is deep sorrow among the old-timers who had watched him shuffle through the dining room for 27 years.

John Robert Wood was his full name, and he probably waited on more celebrities than any other waiter in America. When the Prince of Wales (now the Duke of Windsor) visited the Press Club in the 20's, it was Robert who served him. President Roosevelt knew him well, and once, without being asked, autographed a Press Club menu for him.

One of the saddest nights in Robert's life was on November 19 when the Press Club celebrated its thirtieth anniversary and had President Roosevelt as guest of honor. Robert would have waited on the President, but that night he was a thin home, 500 N street northwest fighting the heart ailment that was to take his life.

One of the greatest events in Robert's life was the farewell party given in his honor at the old Press Club, August 26, 1918. Robert had been drafted for the war, and the club members were gathered to toast him as a departing hero. They presented him with a watch and a purse of $147 in gold. Old Mac, gigantic colored doorkeeper of the club, made a speech, beseeching the Lord to return Robert safely.

Robert, a devout churchman, said he was a peace-loving man who desired to kill no one.

"But if I have to kill anybody," he said, "I hope it will be the Kaiser."

He spent the few remaining weeks of the war with a labor battalion at Newport News, and there he was separated from his $147 in gold by men who knew more about galloping cubes than he did. However, he always treasured his watch.

Robert's body is now at Jarvis' funeral parlor, 1432 U street northwest. Funeral services will be held Friday at 9 a. m. in the Holy Redeemer Catholic Church, New York and New Jersey avenue northwest.

Uncle Sam will have to reach down in his pocket and pull out more than $3,600 to pay for the Warring-Sadur mistrial, it was estimated yesterday.

The sum includes the salaries for three weeks of Justice Bolitha J. Laws, District Attorney David A. Pine, Assistant District Attorney John J. Wilson and three marshals. Some allowance should be made, however, for the last few days, when the jury was deliberating.

Even excluding those expenditures, which would have to be met anyway, the direct cost of the trial to the Government was $1,800, including an estimated stenographic bill of $800; $83 to Government witnesses and $672 in jury fees, plus an estimated $250 hotel bill for the jury.

W. D. Kenyon Stricken After Ride to Hounds

Fauquier Sportsman Dies of Heart Attack After Hard Race

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 6.—Wallace D. Kenyon, 46, industrialist and sportsman, died suddenly of a heart attack this afternoon after riding in a point-to-point race held by the Old Dominion Hounds near Orlean, Va.

He was president of the Webster Silver Co. and the Magnum Tennis Racket Co., Attleboro, Mass.; a director of the Midland Trust Co. and the Rhode Island Hospital, Providence, R. I., and a trustee of the Butler Hospital of Providence. He also was a director of the Providence Country Day School.

He rode today in the 190-pound event of the races staged by the private organization which owns one of the best packs of hounds in northern Virginia, and it was assumed that the 5-mile stretch over Fauquier County countryside was too much for his strength.

However, he appeared in perfect health as he chatted with his hosts, John T. Ramey and John A. Hinkley, and other guests for several hours after the race. Death occurred about 4 p. m. as he was riding the 14 miles back to his estate in his car with his wife, Mrs. Mildred Webster Kenyon.

Popular with Fauquier County sports-lovers, Kenyon did considerable entertaining at Crest Hill.

A daughter, Anne, is an honorary secretary of the Old Dominion Hounds. A son, G. Webster Kenyon, also survives.

His body will be taken from Washington tomorrow to Providence.

Mr. Kenyon's home is in Providence. He had been spending the hunt season with his family at his estate, Crest Hill.

He graduated from Yale University with the Class of 1914. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity; the Jacobs Hill Hunt and the Hope clubs of Providence; the Dunes Club, of Narragansett; the North Wales Club, of Warrenton, Va., and the Yale Club, of New York City.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

With two titles already taken by New York players in the American Contract Bridge League's winter nationals at Cleveland, it appears as if the Cleveland experts will have to do some strong playing in the next few days if they are not to be routed entirely. Of the remaining events, the team of four and the open-air championships, the New Yorkers are experts at team play, and the skillful partnerships of the men experts is legendary.

More was expected of the Cleveland players, as this city has long been known as a center of bridge activities and for the many champions it has developed. Such players as Henry P. Jaeger, authority on the squeeze; Dr. J. B. Skuse, president of the Cleveland Whist Club; Mrs. Anne Rosenfeld, Mark J. Nagusky, Alvin Landy, Arthur S. Goldsmith, Jeff Glick, Mrs. E. T. Randall and others were expected to be high scorers.

As for the comparatively small but skillful group of New York stars that found time to take in the tournament the most outstanding achievement was the recapturing of the mixed-pair title by Mrs. Ilma Rush, who was paired off this time with Fred D. Kaplan, New York attorney. Last year she won with Harry J. Fishbein, of New York. In a large game, such as this luck plays a large part, and, in addition to superlative play, it is also necessary to get the "breaks."

The elimination of Mrs. Robert B. Fuller and Oswald Jacoby, while surprising, was not startling. For two such aggressive and dramatic players to blend well would be a feat.

Good Sportsmanship

A posy should be offered to Mrs. James H. Lemon, Mrs. A. P. Stockvis, both of Washington, and Mrs. Ralph C. Young, of Philadelphia, who won the women's team contest in 1937 for refusing to enter the play this year without their fourth member, Mrs. Martin West, also of Washington, who is ill.

Before this event the Cleveland Women's Duplicate Club gave a breakfast to the visiting women players. They are planning still further social activities to make the out-of-towners' stay a pleasant one.

Cleveland Defends Cleverly

Today's hand illustrates that Cleveland play at its best matches that of New York, though it has not functioned to advantage thus far in the tournament. It shows Jaeger brilliantly defending and defeating a three no-trump contract through a speedy false card.

Jaeger opened the seven of spades, not the happiest lead, but declarer could have taken the finesse in any event. The spade ten was played from the board and South overtook with the jack.

Declarer returned the six of clubs, and Jaeger, who had already noted and considered the finesse possibilities, played his club queen as quick as a flash, making it seem like a singleton. This play led declarer to believe the ten was guarded in the East hand.

He, therefore, took the queen with dummy's ace and led back the club deuce, finessing the nine in his hand. Jaeger won with the ten, and South realized he had been outwitted. Try as he would, he could not now avoid defeat, for he had but eleven tricks: three clubs, two spades, four diamonds and two hearts. South was forced to give a heart trick to East at the end.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

ONE morning, more than eight years ago, MISS EVA ROGERS took a civil service stenography examination and learned, later on, that her paper was flawless. Her grade was 100—an extraordinary mark for anyone to make.

EVA ROGERS

She was appointed in the Department of the Interior eight years ago and at present is employed as a stenographer in the office of C. MARSHALL FINNAN. MISS ROGERS has been quite active in employe recreational affairs; has been the girl who cut most of the stencils for the renowned I. D. R. A. News.

So appropriately, S. M. BARRETT, editor of the I. D. R. A. News, yesterday nominated MISS ROGERS for the title of "Miss Civil Service." We have pleasure in presenting the picture of this Tennessee girl whose grade of 100 is something again for emphasis.

NOTE TO the inquirers about Federal press service jobs: there aren't any good ones at the moment, so far as we can learn. And the chances are that there won't be anything good for some time to come. Also, the day of clamping people off-hand into the spots is passing. Civil service will be drawn on more and more. Civil service spokesmen say that scarcely more than a dozen of these places are filled off the registers in any year—and the number of applicants for each job is tremendous. Even for the job of messenger, the number of applicants is rarely under 60,000. And obviously the press jobs are more attractive and bring a consequently greater deluge of applications. It looks like a tough field to crack. And remember that if a conservative Administration comes in, the number of press jobs is likely to decrease. There has been, you know, some talk that the press services are propaganda units of the Government—but this view isn't shared here. In any event, the outlook for extensive press services is hazardous and some other fields of employment might be more desirable.

THEY DIDN'T want it so generally known—and, anyhow, there is no need to make a rush on the public assistance division because the 480 garments are being distributed entirely on the basis of need. But these 480 garments—consisting of men's overcoats, mackinaws and girls' coats and suits—are the first of the WPA-acquired clothing to come here. The WPA got the clothes (and there are some good pin stripes and other lookable stuff among it) with the notion of lending them to project employes. And this was the idea when the 480 garments were sent here. But the process was changed so that instead of lending the coats and suits, these are given away to project employes upon recommendation of supervisors.

CORRIDOR THOUGHTS: The new Agriculture division of Special Publications and Reports where the principal duty, 'tis said, is to write speeches for the Secretary and others. Some nice salaries there . . . And the thought of the young man that FCA is so congenial to work in that it almost makes you forget the generally low salaries and dim chances of promotion . . . And how if you come into the service with the aroma of the New Deal upon you your chances of getting along in this world are greatly enhanced . . . And how certain chiefs will tell you that if you leave your job through transfer or just plain quitting that he can't get along, that the sky will fall—and how that same chief will do nothing to help you get promoted so you'll want to stay where you are . . . But of how they will generally give a raise after you've gotten another job, and how this makes you wonder that they didn't recognize your good work all along . . . And it's painful to have to sandbag a raise by threatening to quit . . . And that the only way to get ahead is to know somebody above you and think the way he does . . . Horatio Alger to the contrary, to know the right guy is still as important as hard work in the Federal Government.

NOTES: J. O. Burnham, recently re-elected president of N. F. F. E. Local 262, announces the appointment of the following chairmen of committees: A. D. Sartwell, ways and means; Mrs. Sue Inge, entertainment, and E. C. Hooper, membership . . . The administrative headquarters of the NYA is now located on the seventh floor of the Washington Building, New York avenue and Fifteenth street northwest. The change resulted from a shortage of space at 916 G street northwest, where the administrative offices have been located since last June.

Bob Burns Says—

Sittin' up here and writin' these articles every day is a lot of fun but I'll have to admit—it's pretty tame. Sometimes I long for the hustle, bustle and roar of the pressroom of the Van Buren Daily Argus. There's a paper with a tradition. She's never been scooped on local items.

It may be because it's the only paper in town but I can remember the editor rushin' into the office one day and sayin': "Come on, boys, we've got to get out an extra right away. We was the first paper to flash the news that Fort Smith was in flames and now we want to be the first to inform our readers that the report was absolutely without foundation!"

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Bedtime Story

Disgrace is all he has to show
Who blindly lets his temper go.

—Blacky the Crow

"Caw, caw, caw!" laughed Black the Crow at the top of his voice. "Caw, caw, caw!" Blacky's voice carries far. Other Crows came hurrying over to see what it was all about. So did Sammy Jay. Reddy Fox happened to be nearby and at once he pricked up his ears. Then he grinned and hurried in that direction.

"Something worth seeing over there," said Reddy to himself. "There is always something worth seeing when Blacky laughs like that. That fellow doesn't miss much that is going on. Any one who pays attention to Blacky can learn a lot, sometimes much to his own advantage."

Old Man Coyote had similar thoughts as he also moved in the direction of the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Lightfoot the Deer threw up his handsome head and his big ears were wide spread as he listened. Then he moved quickly, but quietly toward that little pond in the Green Forest. As a matter of fact, all the furred and feathered folk who happened to be near that pond headed toward it. Curiosity led them. It wasn't idle curiosity. They knew by the sound of Blacky's voice that he was excited, but not afraid. There was no fear in his voice, so he wasn't watching a common enemy. Even so it might be well to find out just what was exciting Blacky so.

Now Sammy Jay and the other feathered folk who answered to that "Caw, caw, caw" approached openly. They came hurrying from various directions with no effort to keep out of sight. With Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Lightfoot the Deer it was very different. As they drew near the pond they moved silently and with the greatest caution. It might be one of those two-legged folk Blacky was watching. The fact that he was not afraid did not mean that there was no cause for them to be unafraid. So their approach was silent and cautious.

So it was that in a surprisingly short space of time Paddy's pond was ringed wth visitors and each in turn at the first good look over that pond became as excited and interested as Blacky, though less noisy.

Out on the ice of the pond at Paddy's house, the walls and roof of which rose high above the surface, was Buster Bear. Now to his smaller neighbors, Buster is always exciting when they see him even though he be doing nothing. This time, however, there was real cause for excitement. To begin with, Buster had lost his temper. Why it is that loss of temper so often seems to delight spectators I don't know, but it does. It did now. Blacky and his friends and Sammy Jay and some of the other feathered folk were screaming at the top of their lungs. They were enjoying hugely the spectacle of great big Buster Bear growing quite beside himself with rage and, like most people who lose their tempers, doing foolish things.

Buster was doing his best to break into the house. He climbed up on it. He tried to dig his claws into it and pull it apart. He struck at it with his great paws and didn't make the least impression on it. That roof was solidly frozen just as Paddy had hoped it would be. That was because he had plastered it with wet mud just before Jack Frost had arrived. The sticks of which that house was made had been laid by the builders so that they pointed in all directions and thus were so tangled together that it would have been difficult to pull one out without patience and a lot of work. And then the wet mud had worked down in between them and frozen solid. So big as he was Buster Bear could do nothing about it. He did claw away a little mud, and he did get hold of the end of a stick and chew it to shreds, but that was all he could do.

He walked round and round the house, attacking it now here and now there. He would move back a little and sit up while he glared at it, his little eyes red with rage. Then he would attack it again, growling and snarling. He was wasting time and temper to no purpose, but the entertainment of his neighbors. Silly, wasn't it?
